TIMONIUM, MD. — C Aitenbrae Starbuck Ada owned by Gay Ridge and Kingstead Farms, claimed her reward as supreme champion over all breeds after being named grand champion Holstein at the Maryland State Fair on Monday.

Ada is scored Ex-94 and was named supreme champion at the Pennsylvania National Show in Harrisburg as a 3-year-old. Reserve champion went to Marion Andrew for Land-O-Hills Supreme-Et.

Judge Mike Stiles of Clearbrook, Va., said that outstanding udder quality, sound feet and legs and sharpness of frame and strong dairy characteristics were big factors in choosing the 5-year-old pair as grand and reserve champions.

National Egg Market

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE: Prices trended higher for mediums in the Northeast, otherwise prices were unchanged. The trade sentiment was about steady with some caution showing on the larger sizes. Movement of cartoned eggs ranged light to instances very good with the best call where features were in progress. Supplies of extra large were fully adequate to ample and offered; large were at least adequate; and mediums ranged adequate to tight. Breakers took a wait and see approach. Trading and demand was light and nest run prices were unchanged. Demand for light type hens was light. Some flocks previously booked were rescheduled for later pick-up.

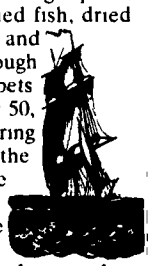
The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

SEPTEMBER 14-20, 1992

MAYFLOWER DAY, SEPTEMBER 16

A LONG JOURNEY

The Mayflower, once used to transport barrels of wine from Bordeaux to London, left Plymouth England, on September 16, 1620, with 149 people aboard The ship, under the command of Master Jones, an old whaling captain, was well stocked with food (salted beef dried fish, dried beans and peas, turnips, oatmeal, hardtack, and beer to drink) Also stored on the ship was enough furniture for 19 cottages, goats, poultry and pets The Pilgrims were young only four were over 50, and 34 were children One child was born during the journey, and one passenger and four of the crew died Vicious storms almost made the journey a disaster, but on November 21 the 66th day of the journey, the Mayflower came into Provincetown Harbor, Massachusetts



The journey of a thousand miles starts with a single step. — Chinese Proverb

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Use the leftover water from cooking vegetables or eggs to water your houseplants.

EARTHWISE

Clothes dryers are heavy users of electricity, so use them with caution. Most areas have cheaper rates at off-peak hours, so plan ahead and do your laundry at night. Use a dryer when you have a full load, and don't overdry your clothes. Take out shirts and blouses when still damp but wrinkles are out. They'll finish drying on a hanger. Make sure to remove the lint from the filter every time you use the dryer If you live where you can put up a clothesline outdoors, try it Your clothes will have the most wonderful scent when dry

HOT POTATO SALAD

6 medium potatoes, peeled and cut into chunks
2 eggs, hard-boiled and chopped
1 cup chicory, chopped
4 slices bacon, diced
¼ cup onion, minced
1 egg, beaten
¼ cup cider vinegar
salt to taste

Boil potatoes, drain, and add chopped eggs and chicory. Fry bacon and onion until brown. Drain before adding to potatoes. Add bacon fat slowly to beaten egg and mix well. Add vinegar and salt and pour mixture over potatoes Mix lightly and serve hot

Serves 6 people.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

SOUTHEAST: Sunny and mild, rain in Florida; then showers and cooler

MIDWEST: Clear and warm; then turning cool with showers south and west.

NORTHWEST: Cooler temperatures with rain; then clearing and warmer, some showers south.

OPINION

A Million People Wait

Next Saturday night the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Program will again stage the annual state dairy princess pageant at the start of the All-American dairy week. Robin Wilbur will finish a year of superb work in the promotion of the state dairy industry and its products, and a new state princess representative will be crowned.

The dairy princess program dates back to 1956 when the Miss Milk Maid Contest was initiated by the Pennsylvania Association of Milk Dealers. Later the Pennsylvania Holstein Association and the Atlantic Dairy Association worked the program. And in 1983 the present Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc., was formed to provide a more uniform program. Jan Harding is affectionately known as the "mother" of all that the dairy princesses do for the industry. Of course, Jan will be the first to give credit to her regional coordinators and all the parents and other volunteers who help.

The program reaches thousands of consumers. For example, the 39 princesses and 25 alternates made 1744 school presentations; 561 store and mall presentations and 510 non-farm speeches. In just these three categories, one quarter million consumers were reached.

In addition, they participated in 716 parades and other special events; appeared on 741 radio and TV programs; distributed 176,213 recipe folders and 134,041 advertising specialities and traveled 112,585 miles. Oh, yes, they appeared at 371 farm meetings too.

While exact figures on how many people may have listened to the TV and radio programs or lined the parade routes can only be estimated, we are sure the combined efforts of the dairy princesses across the state reached more than a million people with the good news of the nutritional value of milk and dairy products.

Accolades are in order and we extend them. But we also know this year's dairy princesses will not rest on the current accomplishments. On September 19, 33 new county princesses will compete for the state title. And one will be chosen to represent the state for the coming year. It will be a glamorous time for the winner.

But the county princesses are already winners. And the importance of a local princess representing local dairy farm families to local consumer families is not a small thing. In fact, because so many of the consumer contacts are made at the local level, the presentations made by the county princess represents the heart of the princess promotion program.

To the retiring princesses, we say to a job well done, "Thank You!" And to the new class, we say, "Best Wishes! A million people wait to hear your milk message."

NOW IS THE TIME

By John Schwartz
Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Prepare For Big Harvest

With the good growing weather we had this spring and summer, crops are looking great.

The tall corn could cause some harvesting problems. Now would be a good time to check belts and chains for wear. Replace worn parts and have spares on hand for breakdowns. Make sure all grease fittings are working and are lubricated frequently.

Adjust ground speed to crop density. By slowing up a little could prevent a major break and loss time due to clogs.

When equipment must be unclogged, make sure the power is turned off before working on the harvesting equipment. This will prevent loss of fingers, arms, feet, legs or life.

When traveling on highways, make sure your "Slow Moving Vehicle Sign" is visible.

By taking a little extra time, we can keep this harvest season accident-free.

To Monitor Silage Moisture Levels

Moisture content at harvest time is one of the most important factors affecting silage quality. When corn silage is too dry, it does not pack well and the risk of spoilage increases. When it is too wet, it leaches nutrients, becomes more sour, and is less palatable.

Aim for 63 to 68 percent moisture when filling upright silos, 65 to 70 percent for horizontal silos, and 55 to 60 percent for oxygen-limiting structures. Monitor the moisture content of whole stalks in the days and weeks preceding filling.

Under normal conditions, corn, as it matures, will lose about 0.5 percent moisture per day. Another guideline is to chop corn when the milk line is one third of the way down from the top of the kernel. For oxygen-limiting structures it should be about halfway down the kernel.

To Cure Silage Before Feeding

According to Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent, feeding uncured silage to cows may throw them off feed and reduce milk production.

Shirk advises that one way to help prevent this problem is to open the fields up about two weeks before normal filling time. Instead of blowing this early cut silage into the silo, fill a bag or make a stack and let it cure. By the time it is cured, you may feed the herd from this cured supply while the silo is being filled, refilled, and going through fermentation.

Your rewards for this effort may come in the form of larger milk checks and smaller veterinarian bills.

For higher quality early cut silage, plant the ends and opening rows of the field to a shorter season hybrid so it will be more mature when the fields are opened.

PUT OUT YOUR HAND!

September 13, 1992

Background Scripture:
Exodus 3:1 through 4:17.
Devotional Reading:
Exodus 4:10-16.

When I was in my first pastorate in the suburbs of Harrisburg, PA, one day ont he way to call in the hospital, I saw a woman hit by a car. As I pulled over to the curb, I was sure that she had not survived, for she ahd been thrown into the air and came down with a terrible thud. I had always been squeamish about physical injuries. The sight revolted me. So, I assumed that on this busy street there would be someone less squeamish and more knowledgeable to do whatever needed to be done before an ambulance arrived.

But, although several other peopled looked on with me, none made a move to go to the fallen woman's side. At last, I realized that if anything was going to be done, it would have to be me. So, for the first time in my life, I put aside my abdominal butterflies and knelt beside the bloodied woman to do whatever I could do. Miraculously, she was still alive, although I was sure she could not long survive. Nevertheless, later that same day in the hospital I saw her again and was told that she would recover and live.

AN 80-YEAR OLD FAILURE

I must confess that putting out my hand that day to touch her was one of the hardest things I had ever done. But, it seemed, I had no choice because no one else was going to do it and I knew that someone had to at least try. I had no idea how I could be of help to her, but that all became pretty academic when I put out my hand and did what I thought, for me, was impossible. I have since come to realize that most of the worthwhile things in the world have been accomplished by people who were just as scared as I was, and just as certain they were not equal to the task.

Today, we celebrated Moses as a great man of faith, but we overlook the fact that he was certain that he was not the man for the job. Up until the time of this great wayside experience, Moses had not demonstrated any leadership or spiritual sensitivity. And, most important of all—something we usually overlook—when this challenge came to him, he was already 80 years old, an age long past the point at which people today think they can be of any service.

I WILL TURN ASIDE

So, what made the difference between this 80-year old failure and the man of faith we revere today? For one thing, Moses made the change possible when, seeing the burning bush, he said to himself, "I will turn aside and see this great sight, why the bush is not consumed"(3:3). Probably that one decision is what most differentiates us from Moses. Too many of us would have said—and do say today—"Hmm, isn't that strange!" and kept going. God has a message for each of us, but we will never hear the message unless we are willing to "turn aside and see," to give God a chance to speak from some of the "holy ground" in our own lives.

Perhaps another reason that God was able to reach Moses was that when he challenged, he was honest about his doubts and reservations. When God proposed to send Moses to Pharoah as his representative, Moses did not beat around the burning bush: "Who am I that I should go to Pharoah and bring the sons of Israel out of Egypt?"(3:11). And:"But behold, they will not belive me or listen to my voice..."(4:1). And later: "oh, my Lord, I am not elequent...I am slow of speech and tongue"(4:10). And finally: "Oh, my Lord, send, I pray, some other person" (4:13).

And, because Moses was upfront with his reactions, God was able to deal with them. To every objection Moses raised, the answer is found in God's reassurance: "But I will be with you"(3:12). None of us, by ourselves, is equal to the tasks of God lays upon us. We may not have all it takes to do what has to be done; but, if we give God what we have, he will make up the difference. If we trust him, we can, if we will, respond when he says to us: "Put out your hand...".

These new Doebler hybrids shelled big in dry '91

by Bill Camerer

I'm Bill Camerer, Doebler's research director, at left, checking new inbred with Taylor Doebler, who heads work in hybrid nursery.

Taylor Doebler and I are among the few guys on the East Coast who thrive on steamy summers, searing droughts and hurricanes. Not that we like them. But there's no better time to check out new hybrids under severe stress.

Some ended up on the junk heap in dry 1991. But look at how these new hybrids shelled:

Doebler 75X2, 200 bu. at Rutgers Central NJ trials.

Doebler 73XP, 173.7 bu. in DE's Georgetown trial.

Doebler 69XP, 191 bu. at VA's Orange trials.

Best new hybrids in dry 1991

DOEBLER 86XA-2, 121 days. Knockout for looks, standup and yield. More days you give it, the better it shells. Like 161.3 bu. at all locations in 1989-90. And 181 bu. at Rutgers' 1991 Central trials.

DOEBLER 73XP, 112 days. Ultra deep kernels mean bonus bushels. Even in dry years. Like whopping 173.7 bu. last fall in Delaware's Georgetown plots. Super stalks. Healthy. Shell or chop. But don't crib.

DOEBLER 64XP, 102 days. New ultra deep kernels. Popped 188 bu. at Cornell Ext's 1991 Mt. Morris trials. Low set ears. Great stalks. Top choice where grey leafspot problem. Shell or chop. Don't crib.

DOEBLER 29XA, 81 days. Good stalks for maturity. Quick drydown. Nice grain quality. And watch it shell. 168 bu. in Cornell Ext's Ogdensburg plots in 1991, beating out 42 hybrids.

PDPP Continues Alliance With Penn State Network

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For the seventh consecutive year, the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program has joined the Penn State Sports Network as an exclusive in-game sponsor to promote dairy foods to sport fans and consumers. Listeners will be hearing live football and basketball action interspersed with reminders about the goodness of dairy foods.

As part of the network, Pennsylvania Dairy will have four advertisements per game with several different themes. Efforts will be made to emphasize fluid milk and cheese and tailgating. Real hot chocolate will also be in the focus during the cooler months.

In addition to the advertising, Pennsylvania Dairy receives opening and closing billboard messages, and several promotional opportunities with the Lions, including "Pennsylvania's Finest Tailgate."

The Penn State Sports Network is one of the strongest collegiate networks in the country. The network has 64 stations that cover Pennsylvania and surrounding states reaching millions of consumers and sports fans. Penn State football games, home and away, as well as the University's 28 basketball games will be carried on the program.

Sports marketing has shown to be effective at reaching specific target audiences. It gives the dairy industry just one more angle to reach consumers with a dairy product message. Penn State's Network has a strong and loyal listenership making the program a suitable method to market dairy products.

Fans who want to listen into the network can tune their dial to affiliated radio stations.

Susquehanna Youth Judge Dairy Animals

RONALD CLARK
Susquehanna Co. Correspondent

HARFORD (Susquehanna Co.) — Michele and Steve Pavelski were the winners in two out of three of the age groups who participated in the recent Youth Judging Contest at the Harford Fair Grounds.

The third first place winner was Justin Garner.

The competition was organized by Nick Place, county extension director, Gere Reed, 4-H coordinator, and the Extension staff.

Three classes with four dairy animals per group, were evaluated by the contestants. The classes were Jersey 2-year-old cows; Holstein 2-year-old cows; and Holstein intermediate heifer calves.

In addition to placing the animals correctly, each of the young judges was required to answer two questions pertaining to the dairy industry. Since the participants were divided by age grouping, the questions varied for each of the age groups.

There were seven entries in each of the age groups. The seniors were from 15 to 19 years of age, the intermediate group was from 11 to 14 years old, and the junior group was comprised of youngsters 10 years old and younger. Although sponsored by the 4-H, any county boy or girl was eligible to enter the judging.

Michele Pavelski took first place in the senior judging. She is the daughter of Joe and Sandra Pavelski, of Uniondale, and is a member of the North Jackson Ag Club.

Second place was won by Joshua Harvatine, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Harvatine, of Thompson. Third place was awarded to Matthew, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Curley, Irish Hill. Harvatine is also a member of the North Jackson 4-H, while Curley belongs to the Irish Hill Club.

In the intermediate age group, Steve Pavelski, brother of the senior winner, came out in first place. Second was Ryan Sprout, son of Preston and Valerie Sprout, of Montrose, and a member of the DES (Dimock-Elk Lake-Springville) 4-H Club. Third place was won by Mike Hubbard, whose parents are Gene and Denise Hubbard, of Dimock. Mike is also a member of the DES Club.

Justin Garner placed first in the junior group. He is the son of Jim and Kay Garner, Montrose, and also a member of the DES Club.

Justin Sprout, brother of Ryan, placed second. The third place spot was won by Matthew Robert Pease, whose parents are Lloyd and Denise Pease, of Susquehanna. Matthew is another member of the North Jackson Ag Club.

The official judge for the contest was Kelly Hageman, a marketing communications coordinator for Sire Power. Hageman was born in Wisconsin, where she was raised on a Holstein dairy farm. She is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, where she majored in dairy science. During her undergraduate years she was a member of the University's dairy judging team.

Hageman is no stranger to judging in Susquehanna County. She has excellent rapport with competitors, and not only ranks the animals and gives the reasons for the placings, but also points out to the participants various hints on how cattle should be fitted for show.

First place winners were awarded a feeding bucket, while the second place contestants were presented with a lead line. The third prize for the young people was a livestock brush. The awards were presented by Sire Power.

Disaster Assistance Available

LINCOLN, Ill. — Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan said that the $755 million in emergency funds for agricultural disasters announced by President Bush can apply to program crop losses incurred in 1990, 1991, and 1992.

This is in addition to the $995 million disaster assistance for 1990-1991 crops announced by Madigan January 2.

The application period for disaster claims for fall-seeded program crops planted in 1991 and harvested in 1992 began September 8 and will end October 2.

The application period for producers with losses on other 1992 crops and for producers with losses from 1990 or 1991 crops who did not previously receive disaster payments for those losses will begin on October 12 and end February 12, 1993.

"Disaster assistance is available on a per-farm basis for any two years of 1990, 1991, 1992," Madigan said. "The original program provided $995 million for either 1990 or 1991. Now, relief will also be provided for fall-seeded program crops planted in 1991 for harvest in 1992.

"Producers will be eligible to apply for assistance for 1990, 1991, or 1992 losses. However, if producers received assistance for any of those years, they may not receive further assistance for that crop year.

Madigan said producers intending to file for assistance should begin to assemble their records now, so they will be ready when the official application period opens. They should contact their county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office for additional information.

Selsy Takes Maryland Miss Futurity

EVA MARTIN
Maryland Correspondent

TIMONIUM, Md. — The Cow Palace of the Maryland State Fair served as the grand ballroom for this year's Maryland Holstein Futurity, as Derrwyn Centra Selsy Red-Et, owned by Gary and Brenda Derr of Mt. Airy, was crowned Miss Futurity during the bovine beauty pageant Sunday night.

"This is the kind of cow we're looking for. She catches your eye from the moment you see her," declared Judge Mike Stiles of Waverly Farms near Clearbrook, Va.

The beautiful, outstanding winner also was awarded the title of grand champion at the International Red and White Show earlier this year. During the Holstein show, she received honorable mention to the grand champion, was named best bred and owned, and was shown in the winning class of exhibitor's herd of five females.

The Derrs purchased Selsy's dam at the state sale in 1986 from My Lady's Manor Farm. She has a three-year production record average of almost 30,000 pounds of milk and 1,400 lbs. of fat. She also has three sons going to artificial insemination businesses.

For the event, distinguished guests were escorted into the arena in convertibles to the music of organist Kim Sites. The guests were presented by David Brauning, master of ceremony.

Guests included Marion Andrews, ringmaster; Maryland Farm Bureau Queen Dawn Downey; Maryland Dairy Princess Laura Zimmerman; county princesses Marie Speak, Kristen Archer, Beverly Collier, and Amy Savage; National Holstein Director Marlin Hoff; State Fair Board President F. Grove Miller; Fair General Manager Howard Mosner; Maryland Holstein President Oren Bender, and Judge Mike Stiles.

Queens and princesses dressed in evening gowns and Ring Master Andrews and Judge Stiles in tuxedos gave the appearance of a royal occasion. Anticipation grew in the audience as the participants paraded their 18 Holsteins around the Cow Palace.

After careful consideration, Judge Stiles dismissed the five finalists from the ring. He then gave his reasons for placing 6th - 18th.

Upon the return of the five finalists, Stiles continued to search for Miss Futurity.

As excitement continued to mount in the huge crowd that gathered at ringside, the five finalists were chosen. They were presented as a court for Miss Futurity as she was paraded around the arena to the applause of the audience.

Judge Stiles' placings for the 1992 Maryland Holstein Futurity, not including Selsy, were Cove Run Vtab Sophia Gem, owned by Bender-Harrison-Iager; Lylehaven Jet Denise, owned by Kelli Savage; W Va Greystone AJ RAE, owned by Dr. Francis Daniel; Coldsprings Beaut TOR ET, owned by Marlin Hoff; Penn Gate Chairman Pats, owned by Steve and Chris Wood, and R Gitt; Savage Leigh Boutoniere Ellie, owned by Kelli Savage; Coldsprings Beaut TIC ET, owned by Marlin Hoff; MSV Astro Jet Wheat Et, owned by Gary L. Derr; Locust Ayr Astro Jet Shelly, owned by Michael & Anita Haines; Unicorn Astro Pamela, owned by Unicorn Associates, Inc.; Windsor Manor Jet Kimberly Et, owned by Jason & Donna Myers; Savage Leigh Starbuck Joy Et, owned by Jami Savage; Locust Ayr Astro Jet Rosie, owned by Michael & Anita Haines; Hobble Hill Kingstead Finesse, owned by Amy Savage; Derrwyn Inspiration Bea, owned by Gary Derr; OCS Dairy Phils Beomca, owned by O Clayton Smith; and Coldsprings Jesse Tokay Et, owned by Marlin Hoff.

Production winners, based on energy corrected milk, were: Derrwyn Centra Selsy Red Et, 27,035 pounds; Lylehaven Jet Denise, 26,226 pounds; Locust Ayr Astro Jet Rosie, 22,531 pounds; OCS Dairy Phils Beomca, 22,291 pounds; and Savage Leigh Boutoniere Ellie, 21,323.

During the judge's deliberation, the audience was entertained with barbershop quartet music from Shock Wave, along with a milk promotion skit by Lower Shore Dairy Princess Beverly Collier.

The Maryland Holstein Futurity is sponsored by the Maryland Holstein Association to stimulate interest in the breeding and exhibiting of outstanding registered Holsteins in Maryland. It recognizes the accomplishments of the small and large breeder and the FFA and 4-H exhibitor.

The futurity is based upon the nomination of an animal by its owner, to be shown in the futurity show in the year in which she is eligible.

Four payments are required for each animal that competes. The initial nomination is made as a calf with a fee of $2.50. Four dollars is paid with the renomination as a yearling, $6 as a 2-year-old and the final payment of $10 is due as a three-year-old.

For this futurity, the final nomination and payment included 51 entries. This number was reduced to 18 by show night.

The purse this year ranged from $800 for first place to $65 for 18th place. An additional $260 was awarded in increments of $80, $60, $50, $40, and $30, to the top five animals for their 2-year-old production record.

Entries for the twelfth Maryland Holstein Futurity for 1995 along with first payments are due by Oct. 31, 1992.

Shank Receives Shrine Honor

EVA MARTIN
Maryland Correspondent

TIMONIUM, Md. — Each year, the Maryland Dairy Shrine honors an individual for their contributions to the dairy industry of Maryland. This year, Ralph Shank of Palmyra farm near Hagerstown was awarded this honor.

The 1992 honoree began farming with his father and brother on a diversified farm. In 1963, Ralph and his wife, Patsy began their own herd which has grown to over 200 head of registered Ayrshires with a cureent rolling herd average of 14,063 pounds of milk, 4 percent fat, and 3.4 percent protein.

The recipient of two French Trophies for second high herd average from the Ayrshire Breed Association, he has had 18 bulls enter artificial insemination service and was the breeder of the No. 4 CPI bull in July.

Twelve cows from the Shank herd are listed on the elite list as well as the two top individuals on the CFP and CTPI lists.

For more than fifty continuous years, his family has exhibited at the Maryland State Fair. They have been honored with 14 champion cows, 14 premier exhibitor and 12 premier breeder banners. He has also received champion cow and premier breeder and exhibitor awards at the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show and National Ayrshire Shows. His cattle have been awarded 18 All-American, 23 Reserve All-American and 72 nominations.

In addition to his involvement with Ayrshires, he has always been very active in the organizations that support the dairy industry, serving on many local and state board of directors.

He has been president of the county and state Ayrshire clubs and served as a national director of the Ayrshire Association for over 16 years, completing his term as president this past April.

A familiar face for many years at Purebred Dairy Cattle Association and Dairy Shrine committee meetings, he has served as chairman of both organizations and has been involved with many of their committees. Mr. Shank is currently a member of the board of directors for the Central Maryland Farm Credit.

He has served eight years on the Board of Sire Power, Inc. as an Ayrshire breed representative, on the young sire committee and past president of its Maryland division.

In 1976, he was elected president of Maryland DHI after serving many years as a director to the state board and director and president of Washington County DHI.

Ralph earned 4-H All-Star and FFA American Farmer Awards and continues to support both programs. Palmyra Farm has hosted local, state and regional judging workshops for many years and he encourages his children, grandchildren and many others to take full advantage of the programs available through 4-H and FFA.

When not attending dairy functions, he is very actively involved with his church. He has been a member of most every committee that guides and supports the church, serving as deacon, elder and president on the consistory.

Ralph's wife, Patricia, and son, Ralph Jr., are his partners in the farming operation at Palmyra Farm. They, along with Ralph Jr.'s wife Terrie and children, Ralph's daughter Mary and her husband Mike Creek and children, were present to help honor Ralph as he accepted the 1992 Dairy Shrine Contemporary.

The Maryland Dairy Shrine remains at the former Maryland Division of Sire Power just off Route 15, north of Frederick, and is open to visitors. The present operation at this facility is owned by Mike Creek.

Future annual business meetings of the Maryland Dairy Shrine will be held at the Maryland State Fair during the Maryland Holstein Futurity. A $10 lifetime membership in the shrine is encouraged.

Nominating Committee Chairman Jeff Myers held the election of officers for the Dairy Shrine for the coming year. A unanimous ballot was cast for Joe Schwartzbeck, president; Jim Stonesifer, vice president; Madeline Valentine, secretary; and Jack Remsberg, treasurer.

Hamp/Suffolk Cross Becomes Supreme Lamb

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks Co. Correspondent

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Joyce Heffner's supreme champion market lamb almost didn't make it to a full life, let alone a big fair like the one at Allentown.

Heffner's Hampshire/Suffolk cross was named supreme champion last week, but it wasn't too long ago Heffner was nursing him like he was her own baby.

He was a triplet and apparently had been rejected by his mother when Heffner, 18, a recent graduate of Fleetwood High School, took over his care in February and named him Shorty.

So when Heffner's mother says her daughter raised this lamb herself, it's true. And it was a devotion typical of her 11 years as a 4-H'er, resulting in top honors here. Heffner's care also showed in her taking top honors in the 4-H fitting competition.

Nonetheless, Shorty will be exhibited later this month at the 4-H sheep roundup at the Reading Fair.

Eric Burkheimer of Mechanicsburg won reserve supreme champion with his crossbred wether. He also won the vo-ag division of the market lamb show and was champion FFA showman.

Bruce Snyder of Lehigh County was reserve champion FFA showman and reserve champion FFA fitter.

In the 4-H category, Amy Eshelman of Berks County was the reserve champion fitter and showman. Bruce Snyder was champion showman.

Dale Grim, assistant livestock superintendent, said there were 54 lambs in the 10 market divisions of the show.

Results of the weight divisions are as follows:

Plan For Worst To Keep The Best

GEORGE F. W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — Hurricane Andrew rolls over part of Florida and Louisiana, devastating homes, food resources and agriculture. People have nothing to eat or drink, farm workers have no crops to tend, people are angry at the government for not sending relief quickly enough and weather forecasters are reluctant to say whether or not a natural disaster like this could happen to us in the mid-Atlantic states.

What does the Good Book say? Those who help themselves, God helps.

A standard saying on dairy farms in the Old Country where I grew up was: Always have a year's supply of feed on hand. Is this overly pessimistic? Not if you consider all the many catastrophes in recent months—earthquakes, wildfires, hurricanes, tornadoes, blizzards, floods, hailstorms and drought.

Are there more disasters than ever before and more than we deserve?

For survival, this question is immaterial. Those of us who endured one of the wars during the last 55 years know that survival does not depend on what caused the disaster nor on why help doesn't arrive fast enough.

Simply, survival depends on our forethought, weeks and months ahead. We must anticipate the worst disaster and prepare for it with food, water, cash, feed for the animals, electric generators for standby electricity, blankets, plywood, tent sheeting and more—supplies that will last over the worst days or weeks when everything else is gone.

I know from experience. I lived through six horrible years in World War II.

In 1943 I lost my home and all my belongings during a bombing raid on my hometown, which then resembled the devastation in Homestead, Fla., after Andrew blew through.

But we had cellars filled with coal, sauerkraut, eggs preserved in crocks, canned foods and clothes. We had at least some supplies for the first few days after the bombing.

Dairy farmers had hay barns out in fields in various locations and bunker silos filled with silage. In fall they stockpiled fodder beets away from the farm, so the cattle had something to eat regardless of what catastrophe occurred at the home farm.

We tried to be prepared for the worst, so that we did not have to wait for the government to help us. We always could help ourselves, at least in the beginning.

In recent years in this country, we seem to have taken normalcy and the orderly life for granted. There was a time, however, when a nuclear threat caused many of us to think in terms of shelters and supply reserves.

A nuclear disaster emergency-preparedness program in the event of nuclear power plant meltdown still exists. But other than Three-Mile Island or Chernobyl, it couldn't happen here. At least, that seems to be the prevailing attitude.

Or is it?

Members of the Mormon Church believe in having a one-year supply of food in their cellars. And some people go so far as to build their homes partly underground, not just for safety from nature, but for temperature conservation as well.

Of course, dairy farmers have long practiced haymaking in preparation for the winter when there is no pasture to graze.

When I started at the University of Delaware in the 1950s, I changed the dairy herd from a 6-month to a 12-month silage feeding program. I wanted to avoid problems and uncertainties caused by storms, droughts or poor harvests that soon result in milk production losses, lower income and less profit.

Of course, even this plan was open to the unforeseen hardship. One year a silo fell over because we didn't fill it evenly.

In general, most dairy farmers tend to be prepared for a year with sufficient feed supplies in the loft, in large bales, in silos and grain bins.

What does it take to be prepared?

The average Holstein cow in Delaware is now expected to produce 4-½ percent of their bodyweight in milk, more than 60 pounds per day. To do this, they must eat 3 percent of their bodyweitght in feeds on dry-matter basis per day.

The totals in a year's time are 9 tons of milk per cow, for which dairy farmers have to make stored feed reserves of about 7 tons of dry feeds per cow.

This figure does not include the feeds for the necessary replacement stock of calves and heifers, nor does it allow for feeds wasted during storage, hauling to the cows and in the feed trough.

So a 100-cow Holstein farm needs at least 700 tons of dry feeds, which translates in a practical ration into about 150 tons hay, 850 tons silage and the necessary concentrate supplements.

What large sotrage strcutures this requires! But foresight demands this to keep cows producing and our income ahead of bills.

We have very good data from DHIA about these requirements, what our good cows eat and how much it takes for a year of preparedness.

Just in tons alone (ignoring details of individual nutrient contents) can make significant differences in profits. DHIA data of 4,106 Holstein herds in the Northeast under the Cornell computing system in 1991 revealed what the average cow consumed last year — 8.4 tons of silage, mostly corn; 1.5 tons of hay, mostly alfalfa; and 3.6 tons of concentrate supplements.

High-producing cows ate 1.8 more tons of silage, half a ton less hay, but 1.3 tons more concentrates than low producers. The differences in feeds consumption between high-producing and low-producing cows cost $200.

It was more for the high cow, but they in turn produced $800 more income. This shows that safety planning to avoid drops in milk production really pays.

In addition, the cost of DHIA record system participation may cost $1.50 to $2 per cow per month or about $24 per year. National statistics have shown, however, that DHIA-participating herds outproduce non-participating herds by several thousand pounds of milk per cow per year, but it would take only 200 pounds of milk to pay for the cost of DHIA per cow.

Back to my initial question: Are we next for a disaster to strike?

You can bet there is another one just waiting around the corner to test our resolve to plan ahead. And our DHIA records certainly show that careful planning for that extra amount of feed for the months ahead pays handsome dividends. And while we're at it, how about doing the same for our own families?

October Milk $15.57

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Rex F. Lothrop recently announced a Class I milk price of $15.57 per hundredweight for October 1992.

This price is down 5 cents from September and is $1.04 above last October's Class I price.

Lothrop announced a Class III milk price of $12.66 per hundredweight for August 1992. The Class III price was up 2 cents from the previous month. The October 1992 Class I price and the August 1992 Class III price are based on the August 1992 Minnesota-Wisconsin manufacturing milk price of $12.54 per hundredweight at a 3.5 percent butterfat content.

happening in their bid to move processing to Raleigh and lab services to Maryland.

Principal spokesmen included John Howard, committee chairman; Bob Wenger, Lancaster president, Ken Butcher, director, Dairy Records Processing Center, Raleigh, N.C., and Glenn Shirk, county agent. About 100 farmers attended.

In summary, as reported at the meeting, the Lancaster board and the Pennsylvania board have agreed to a 10-point proposal, fashioned by National DHIA, that says PaDHIA will release Lancaster's herds to Raleigh "without the current contingencies based on execution of a long-term agreement."

And Lancaster DHIA agrees to not pursue its move of lab services to Maryland until National DHIA has another annual meeting in March to bring national bylaws and policies into harmony.

The agreement is for six months. During the agreement, a working group from the local, state and national associations will, among other things, oversee certification fee pricing. In addition, the bylaw change issue will be placed on the four caucus agendas that precede the national DHIA convention.

In his opening statement, Howard summarized the events that led to the present agreement. Quoting from a published report that said under current policy of National DHIA, members have the freedom to choose where their services come from, Howard said the local board thought it was doing what the rules allowed.

"Of the 57 DHIAs in the nation, Lancaster County is the 17th largest," Howard said. "The six states ahead of us have less than 10,000 more cows. If we could pick up 10,000 cows on test, we would be the 11th largest. And we are only a county organization.

"Some other DHIAs need to go across their state to get the number of cows we have. This gives us tremendous advantage in running our field service. We don't need to travel many miles in our concentrated dairy area. Consequently, our supervisors test two to three times more cows per person than in most states. This keeps our overhead down.

"We can contract for processing and lab service from large organizations to give us access to the best technology at competitive cost. With lower overhead, this gives us the ability to be one of the best. Being independent will give us the ability to set our rates and programs especially for owner sampler herds. We want to keep as many people on test as we can.

"Because of our size and close proximity to supervisors, the hiring, training and supervisor conferences can be done with very little expense. The entire cost to run the county is about three cents per cow," Howard said.

"When you have competition, the service gets better and the prices go down," Wenger said. "That's the trend, and national agrees that's the trend. But the question remains how do we go to Maryland and not be in violation of national bylaws. With this six month agreement, we will stay with Pennsylvania for lab service and field certification and keep ourselves within the national bylaws."

Butcher said 83 percent of Raleigh's cows are on their electronic data transfer systems. "As we look at the future record processing, we can see that computing will move away from centralized locations to more local associations. A lot of computing and processing will be done closer to the farm, and only the necessary information transferred to a central location and on to USDA, etc."

Raleigh is a cooperative with an advisory board that includes one member from each of the 16 states in the association. Lancaster will become the 17th. According to Butcher, they have not had a rate increase since 1985, and since that time have given more than $100,000 in a lump rebate to members on two different occasions. Meanwhile, they have built reserves of $350,000 to be used against new computing equipment when needed.

If things go as proposed, the Lancaster supervisors will have the pertinent information that has been transferred from Pennsylvania to Raleigh when they arrive on the farm for the October test. When the test is complete and records processed, the dairy farmer will receive the first reports from Raleigh. According to the 10 point agreement, Lancaster will permit DRPC choice for their members, and Pennsylvania will not compete in the county.

"DHIA is at a crossroads, and many important decisions must be made," Shirk said. "The dairy industry is also in a state of change, and DHIA must meet those changes and challenges of the industry. I think that's what your board struggles with as they try to meet your interests to make sure you get the kind of records and service you need to be current, effective as managers, and competitive with dairymen across the country.

"Your board has worked long and hard the past year, volunteered in your behalf to wrestle with these decisions. They are to be commended. They have taken the leadership nationwide to challenge decisions or lack of decisions and policies that need to be put in place.

"They have your support, as witnessed by the more than 1,000 requests for transfer. That's solidarity, that's unity, numbers, and power that catches people's attention.

"You need freedom of choice. As an extension agent, I will support either choice you make. I'll give them both my full support. You have a big decision to make. I hope you think about it very carefully, talk to your directors, make up your mind," Shirk said. "You will get my support if you go south or if you stay with Pennsylvania."

Northeast DHIA Earns Best Rating

The National Cooperative Dairy Herd Improvement rules begin by stating: "The purpose of these rules is to provide the framework for a uniform record system which will increase farmers' net profits . . . (Rules) serve to ensure that National Cooperative Dairy Herd Improvement Program (NCDHIP) records will provide the accuracy, uniformity, and integrity essential to all segments of the dairy industry. All state DHIA field services, laboratories, and dairy records processing centers (DRPC's) will be evaluated annually under the National Dairy Herd Improvement Association, Inc. (National DHIA) Quality Certification Program to maintain these standards."

Northeast DHIA has just received the results of this annual evaluation. Kaylene Corcoran, National DHIA Quality Certification Representative spent several days in Ithaca reviewing all aspects of the Cooperative's service, education and communication.

Evaluations use a very rigorous and defined point system. There are many categories ranging in value from 5 to 25 points. Each DHIA throughout the country must meet minimum requirements by accumulating points in each category of operation. A final score is then tabulated with a minimum of 75 points necessary for National DHIA certification. Bonus points can be earned for the Field Services category. These extra points are only in the areas of member education, and turnaround time.

The Field Services portion includes categories such as:

- Supervisor training, evaluation and feedback
- Testing interval, Verification of milk weight accuracy, and % Test intervals >45 days
- Communication between managers, members, and the Agriservice community
- Metering devices, methods of sample delivery, and enforcement of National DHI rules

Field Services scored a perfect 117 points out of a possible 117 points (100 standard points plus all 17 Bonus points). According to the executive summary of results, "Northeast DHIA is leading the way in customer oriented DHIA service. . . .The customer support staff of Northeast DHIA is an invaluable group of people who are available to answer questions for both producers and employees."

Members are encouraged to use the toll free number, 1-800-344-2697 whenever questions arise or assistance is needed.

The milk analysis lab also scored exceptionally high with 95 out of a possible 100 points. The laboratory is rigorously evaluated throughout the year with an on-site inspection.

These inspections include a review of:

- Accuracy and repeatability of all equipment and results in the lab
- Continuing education of laboratory technicians
- Safety and overall management of the equipment and facilities

Ms. Concoran noted in her written summary: "The Northeast DHIA lab is professional throughout from its accurate results to the intensive internal calibration schedule, to its appearance."

The executive summary of results concludes by saying "We commend Northeast DHIA staff and employees on their commitment to providing outstanding, professional service." Under stringent National DHIA requirements, this Northeast cooperative is doing more than holding its own. It seems to be thoroughly exceeding minimum boundaries in an effort to provide high quality service aimed at helping members improve the Northeast dairy herd.

Foraging Around

SILO FILLING TIME - IT'S HERE

Silage — that nice smelling, succulent forage preserved by a controlled anaerobic (in the absence of air) fermentation of green forages. It can be made from almost any forage crop including perennial legumes and grasses, sorghums and small grains. Even crops such as sunflowers, soybeans and peanut and pea vines have been ensiled successfully.

But corn is the leading crop used for silage. And based on all of the knowledge we have, when the land and climate are suited for corn, whole plant corn silage produces more digestible energy per acre than any other feed crop.

What makes corn such a big hit for silage? Here are just a few reasons:

• Ensiling the entire corn plant increases the amount of energy per acre from 40 to 50% compared to harvesting only the grain.

• Corn is high in sugar and starch which makes it relatively easy to preserve by ensiling.

• It's a relatively high energy feed, and while it is low in protein, it's an excellent complement for high protein but lower energy alfalfa and other legume forages.

• Corn silage production, harvesting, storage and feeding can be highly mechanized and because of its good ensiling characteristics it can be stored in a variety of structures with relatively low losses when properly harvested and processed.

Silo filling starts in late spring with winter grains. It gets a big boost in mid to late May with first cutting of alfalfa and alfalfa-grass mixtures. It continues all summer with later cuttings of alfalfa, other legumes and grasses, oats, summer annuals and other crops including sorghums.

But silo filling is in full swing right now when one out of every three to four acres of corn grown in Pennsylvania will be ensiled.

HYBRIDS FOR SILAGE

At this time of year there's no need to spend much time talking about hybrids for silage. Suffice it to say that as corn breeders and animal nutritionists take a closer look they now know that when it comes to nutritional value for livestock all corn hybrids are not alike. And it's true that several research studies suggest that the feed value or quality of whole plant corn silage may not be as closely related to grain content as we have always assumed.

Nevertheless until researchers can zero in closer on their findings we can still say with confidence that a hybrid well suited for grain production in your area will also be excellent for corn silage.

CULTURAL PRACTICES

Now isn't the time to go into detail on cultural practices for corn grown for silage either. But we can, and should say that if corn harvested for silage is to be a high quality forage in your livestock ration it must receive top management during production, harvesting and storage.

For example, many studies have shown that increasing your plant populations improved both grain and forage yields with no change in silage quality. Thus, the thumb rule that populations for silage in your area should be 2000 to 4000 plants per acre higher than for grain is still a good one.

Also, we know the importance of a "balanced" soil fertility program for top production. But fertilization can also affect the fermentation process. In fact, recent Wisconsin studies indicate that even greater attention must be paid to nutrient balance when crops are to be ensiled.

MATURITY AT HARVEST

Now is the time to talk about when to harvest your corn crop for silage. Because stage of maturity or moisture at harvest time does have a significant influence on silage yield and quality.

I won't go into all of the details, but based on neutral detergent fiber (NDF) and acid detergent fiber (ADF) values, as well as whole plant yields, for best quality silage stored in conventional silos harvesting when corn is 62 - 68% moisture is a good choice. It should be slightly higher when stored in horizontal silos and slightly lower for limited oxygen silos. This stage, approximately full dent, say Penn State workers, is reached at a minimum of 40 to 50 days after corn has silked. The kernel milk line should be near 50%, and the kernel black layer will not have formed. Frequently when corn reaches physiological maturity total dry matter content is too high, proper fermentation may be a problem and feed quality may be sacrificed.

LENGTH OF CHOP

Now is also the time to talk about fineness of chop. And while researchers may not agree on details a good compromise on chopping seems to be 3/8 to 3/4 inch theoretical length of cut for corn harvested at the recommended stage of maturity. This will assure adequate packing and best use of silo space without sacrificing fiber. If corn is harvested at more mature stages, or when the whole plant contains more than 40% dry matter, a finer cut may be desirable.

And don't ignore the other rules of good silage making. Fill your silo as rapidly as possible. Distribute the ensiled material as uniformly as possible. And do what is necessary to insure a good pack and keep oxygen out to reduce mold damage and spoilage losses.

Compared to most forages corn is considered a natural silage crop. And researchers can't agree on the value of silage additives for this crop. Nevertheless many now feel that treating corn silage with a proven silage additive may be beneficial, especially if conditions at ensiling are less than ideal.

SORGHUM FOR SILAGE

Because of our enthusiasm for corn as a silage crop, little is said about when to harvest forage sorghums for silage. It's generally true that under the best growing conditions the yield of feed nutrients per acre of forage sorghum is only 90 to 95% that of corn. And the feed value of sorghum silage is only 85% or so of that of corn silage. Still forage sorghums are known to be more drought tolerant than corn. And growing forage sorghums on droughty soils may be preferable to corn.

If you are growing sorghums for silage this year and hope to maximize production and quality, harvesting at the soft to medium dough stage is your best bet. And follow the same silage-make rules for sorghum as you do for corn.

Dairy Princess Coronation

The Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc. program is supported by Pennsylvania dairy farmers through their advertising and promotion agencies: American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc., Middle-Atlantic Milk Marketing Association; Federal Order #36-Mideast UDIA, Allied Milk Producers, and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, with contributions from other dairy-related organizations and individuals. Again this year, as the result of a grant from Sire Power, Inc. and several anonymous individuals, the awards to the winners will be: $1,200 to the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and $600 to each of her two Alternates.

In addition, three girls will receive $100 awards for outstanding original dairy promotion presentations and two will receive $50 awards for compiling scrapbooks which chronicle their dairy princess activities. The contestants themselves will select the coveted "Miss Congeniality" award from among their own ranks.

The primary purpose of the Dairy Princess Program in Pennsylvania is the promotion of the dairy industry and its products on the local grassroots level. Incentive Awards will again be given to the counties whose last year's princess and her committee completed the incentive requirements. This year, 31 counties will be recognized.

In addition, an individual award of $300 will be given to the young lady who stood out as the outstanding dairy promoter during her county reign. This award, the "Tina Shultz Memorial Award," is in memory and honor of the outstanding young lady, who in May 1986 succumbed to cancer, during her reign as Huntingdon County Dairy Princess. The runner-up award of $150 will be presented in memory of Margaret Shultz, Montgomery County, also a member of the Princess class of '85-'86, who recently also succumbed to cancer.

Pa. Dairy Princess and Promotion Services announces that the Saturday morning presentation session will be open to the public free of charge. It will run from 8 a.m. until 12:00 noon in the Sheraton Ballroom.

Saturday evening, September 19, promises to be an exciting evening for 33 county contestants and their families as well as for our Pennsylvania Dairy Industry. Tickets for the event are $20 per person and are available on a "first come" basis from Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc., 214 South Street, Box 640, Clarion, PA 16214. (814) 226-7470. All tickets must be paid in advance and will be held at the door. Ticket request deadline is September 16.

CHELATION THERAPY

THIS MAY BE YOUR ANSWER TO: Heart Problems, High Blood Pressure, Poor Circulation, Arthritis, Diabetes, Leg Cramps, Numbness, Tingling, Cold Hands And Feet & Atherosclerosis.

Dear Golden Pride/Rawleigh:
After having a kidney stone attack, I was not able to pass the stone. It felt like it was stuck in a valve leading from the bladder. I had pain every few minutes for several days. When a Golden Pride/Rawleigh acquaintance suggested I use Formula #1 to help, I decided to give it a try.
Using one teaspoon of Formula #1 every four hours, I passed the stone in three days. Now I keep taking one teaspoon of Formula #1 each day and I have no more problems with kidney stones whatsoever.
Dave Valder

Dear Golden Pride/Rawleigh:
In 1970, I had coronary vein graft surgery at age 45. Then in 1984, I had a massive heart attack with four vein grafts at age 59. In 1988, the blockage in my right carotid artery was 95%. Surgery was done on the right side only. The left side also showed 95% (blockage) with surgery to follow later on. At this time, I was dizzy and would fall to the floor when I raised my head and arms upwards to reach the first shelf in a cupboard.
In June 1990, I was introduced to Golden Pride's Formula #1. Almost one year later, the left side artery improved to 65%. The ultrasound test showed that no surgery was required.
While I was taking this formula, everyone noticed I had a pink color to my flesh. I could now walk 3 miles every morning plus ride 5 miles on an exercise bike, bend and stoop to do yard work, all of which I was unable to do prior to taking Formula #1. Since age 45, I had been told by my physicians that I had severe coronary artery disease through my entire body. Now at age 66, I feel my arteries are clearing and I have more mobility in all parts of my body. I can raise my head and arms upward without dizzy spells. My blood pressure is on the low side and I have more stamina than in the past 20 years
I feel Formula #1 has helped me as I now take only two heart medications as compared to 6-8 during the past 20 years.

Youth Can Go For Gold At PAADS

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — More than 2,000 youth from all over the Eastern United States will be thinking, performing and competing at the 29th Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show Sept. 21 and 22.

The Invitational Youth Dairy Cattle Judging Contest, the Pennsylvania Junior Dairy Show, Junior Dairymen Contest and the PA 4-H - FFA Dairy Judging Forum challenges young minds and helps the contestants develop dairy management skills.

The Pennsylvania All-American is proud to host so many activities and contests for dairy youth. Not only are there team prizes, but individual scholarships and recognition to be earned as well. From collegiate competitors to junior 4-H members, the contests are designed to help youngsters learn more about the dairy industry and gain confidence in themselves.

The Invitational Youth Dairy Cattle Judging Contest will be held on Monday, Sept. 21, with competition in three divisions. The All-American offers over $6,000 in premiums for the top 12 teams in collegiate, 4-H and FFA classes.

In addition, special awards will be presented to high scoring teams and individuals by the following: the Ayrshire Breeders Association, Brown Swiss Cattle Breeder's Association, American Guernsey Association, Holstein-Friesian Association of America and American Jersey Cattle Club. The day-long competition is followed by the annual awards banquet which is sponsored by Agway Inc. and the Atlantic Breeders Cooperative.

The Sixth Annual Junior Dairymen Contest will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 22 at the All-American. This contest matches wits with talented youth on 10 tough topics, including sire selection, replacement selection, meats identification, forage and grain identification, milk quality, reproductive management, dairy products, current issues in the dairy industry, calf health, and farm business management.

Premiums for this contest, sponsored by Church and Dwight Co. and Pfizer Inc., will be awarded to both the top 10 teams and individuals. Lunch will be provided for all contestants compliments of Franklin Laboratories.

The 18th Annual Pennsylvania Dairy Judging Forum will be hosted by the PA All-American Dairy Show on Tuesday, Sept. 22. This contest is open to Pennsylvania 4-H and FFA members only.

Contestants will judge seven classes - five cow classes and two heifer classes - and take a quiz on dairy herd management. There will be no oral reasons given in this contest.

The top 10 teams in both 4-H and FFA and the top 10 individuals in each division will be awarded premiums and ribbons. Fisher and Thompson, Inc. of Leola are providing the individual premiums, while team premiums are supported by U.S. Agri-System Inc., of Oxford, and Hershey Chocolate USA, of Hershey.

Share in the competitive spirit of the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, as dairy leaders of the future vie for first place.

For more information on any of these contests, write to the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show, Farm Show Complex, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9408, or call 717-787-2905.

AGCO ALLIS
6600 SERIES TRACTORS

OPERATOR FRIENDLY

The AGCO Allis 6600 Series row crop tractors are engineered to put you comfortably in control. In addition to a comfortable cab or a platform and ROPS, you get low maintenance, low operating costs and a 4-year/4,000-hour warranty.

- Trouble-free, air- and oil-cooled engine. The 6600 Series tractors are equipped with low-maintenance, 4-cylinder, air- and oil-cooled diesel engines. The 6670 provides 63 PTO hp and the 6680 73 PTO hp, both with 22% torque rise. The 6690 has a turbocharged 81 PTO hp engine that delivers a 28% torque rise, as well as the best fuel economy in its class.
- Many speed choices. The synchropower transmission with a separate synchro-reverser offers 12 forward and 12 reverse speeds, planetary final drive and a self-adjusting, hydraulically-actuated clutch. An optional creeper transmission provides 16 forward and 16 reverse speeds; a dual speed option has 24 forward and 12 reverse and a power Hi-Lo transmission provides 30 forward and 30 reverse speeds. All tractor models are available as either 2WD or AWD.
- PTO power and versatility. The independent PTO operates at 540/1,000 rpm with 6- and 21-spline shafts and has a hydraulically-actuated wet PTO clutch. The Category II/I 3-point hitch has a convenient rear remote control and is equipped with telescopic stabilizers. Optional telescopic lower links are also available.
- Quality performance and comfort. The 6600 Series tractors ride on premium Goodyear radial tires. They have hydrostatic power steering, a tilt-telescopic steering wheel, hydraulically-actuated wet disc brakes and a mechanically-actuated differential lock. AWD models have four-wheel brakes for 40% better braking and an operator controlled front differential lock for tighter turns. All operated from the comfort of the enclosed cab.

To experience the user-friendliness of the 6600 Series tractors, or any of the "orange" line of AGCO Allis tractors ranging from 40 to 128 PTO hp, stop by or call us soon.

Import Ban On New England Horses Lifted

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff has lifted an interstate quarantine imposed on July 17 in response to an outbreak of equine disease in New England.

"The disease does not appear to have spread from those states, and there have been no new cases reported in those states in the past month," Wolff said. "However, the cause of the outbreak has still not been determined, and horse owners are encouraged to report any incidence of unusual equine disease."

Lifting the quarantine does not eliminate restrictions on the interstate movement of horses. Horses imported into Pennsylvania must be accompanied by health certificates noting that the animals have no signs of contagious diseases. The certificates must be issued by a veterinarian within 30 days of the animals' transportation to Pennsylvania.

For more information about health certification or to report an incidence of unusual equine disease, horse owners should contact their veterinarians or the department's Bureau of Animal Industry, 2301 North Cameron St., Harrisburg, PA 17110, telephone (717) 783-5301.

Sheepberry Farms: A Hobby Out Of Control

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HALIFAX (Dauphin Co.) — Sheepberry Farms is the result of a hobby out of control.

That's what John and Lynn Zerphey tell people who question their saneness for moving to the remote, mountainous region of Dauphin County from the artsy community of Mount Gretna.

The Zerpheys' lifestyle took a surprising turn in 1985 when Lynn begged her husband to purchase a Border Leicester sheep after watching a wool spinning demonstration.

Intrigued with the textures and colors of using natural wools and with the unique personalities of sheep, the Zerpheys soon became adept both as fiber artists and as sheep and llama herders.

Soon their six-acre plot in Mt. Gretna was not sufficent to raise the sheep that they continued to add to their herd. Because the Zerpheys wanted to continue working at their Y-Z Printing business in Elizabethtown, they looked in Lancaster and Lebanon counties for a farm. The high prices discouraged them. Two years ago, they saw an 84-acre Dauphin County farm advertised in Lancaster Farming.

They took a drive through the winding, mountainous roads until they came to a breathtaking view of a valley surrounded by mountains. The dilapidated house, barn, and outside buildings did not hinder their ability to see what the place could become.

Sheepberry Farms established

The first year was one of back-breaking cleanup as the Zerpheys removed 15 truckloads of trash accumulated in the buildings, replaced broken windows, and pronounced war on the rats. They painted the weatherbeaten buildings white and trimmed them in blue. They enclosed the whole 84-acres with a high tensile fence and partitioned inside areas with wooden fences.

Before the purchase of the Dauphin County farm, neither of the Zerpheys had a farming background nor did they know the work required to maintain a farm. What they did have is an appreciation for nurturing the land, a passion for reading about every aspect of farming, and a willingness to ask the right people questions.

"We did our homework," Lynn said. "We wrote to Penn State for information on sheep, contacted a vet, and read every library book that we could find on the subject."

Lynn's eyes still shine with wonder as she talks of her "beautiful sheep" and the amazement of getting so much free information from Penn State Extension. The Zerpheys joined the Sheep and Wool Association where they found people willing to share information on the care of sheep and wool.

Llamas added to sheep herd

The Zerpheys own about 80 head of sheep including Border Leicester, Lincoln, Rambouillet, and Suffolk breeds. Intermingling with the sheep are several stately llamas that are used both for breeding and for their soft, luxurious wool.

As far as they know, Sheepberry Farms is the only farm in the state to raise llamas and sheep together.

About three years ago, Lynn visited a lady who owned llamas. "I was just taken with them right off the bat," Lynn said. "But, when my husband found out how much they cost, he was not so intrigued."

The Zerpheys raise several llamas, which they use for breeding purposes and for the wool in their projects as fiber artists.

Nevertheless, the couple researched llamas and discovered that llamas and sheep could feed on the same grain and hay. Both species are copper sensitive and can be housed together.

In February 1989, the Zerpheys purchased their first two gelding males. They chose Bolivian llamas with short wool since long hair causes more stress on llamas during hot weather.

"When my husband visited a llama farm, he got 'baby' fever and purchased three bred females," Lynn said.

Llamas have a gestation period of 11½ months and they almost always birth during daytime hours.

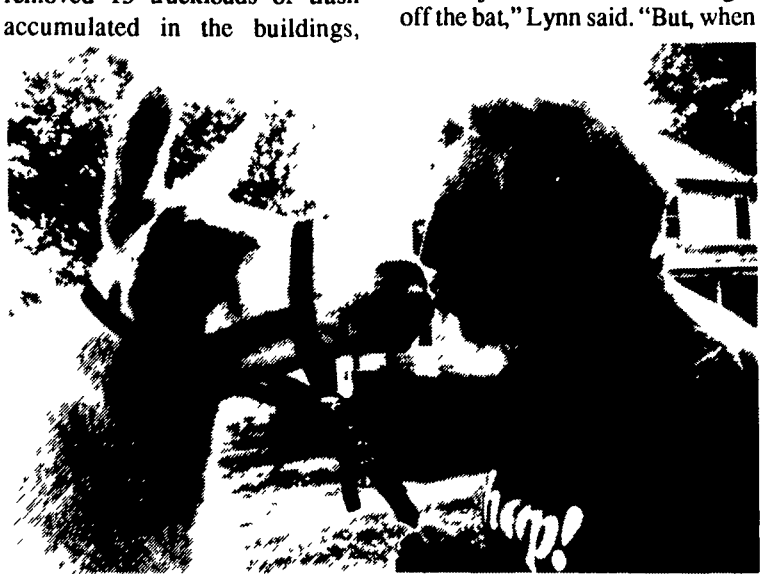
For the past several years, the Zerpheys have bred llamas but have never seen a birth since both husband and wife continue to work full time at their printing business.

"We come home — and here's a baby," Lynn said of the llama's ability for easy birthing.

The Zerpheys sell the babies with the stipulation of visiting rights. Lynn personally delivers the llamas with a bag of feed, hay, and registered papers. She offers service after the sale believing that healthy animals are productive animals.

In 1990, the Zerpheys participated in a Penn State tour of a 3,000-head sheep ranch. They were surprised to find that llamas were used to guard the sheep from predators.

The Zerpheys work together to process wool from their flock. Known as fiber artists, John weaves and Lynn hand-spins, knits, and crochets.



Llamas are great kissers according to John.

Although they have a Border Collie that does well with the sheep, he becomes intimidated by the llamas, which assume responsibility for the sheep.

Animal care

In the daily care of the animals Lynn, who is a registered nurse said that her nursing ability comes in handy to insert a prolapse uterus back into a sheep, sew it up, and assist with birthing. Ironically, she cannot bring herself to innoculate her own sheep although she is adept at diagnosing health problems.

One of the most beneficial methods for diagnosing health problems is to sweep the aisle where the animals are housed two times daily.

"Looking through the manure pile is not glamorous but it's the thing to do," Lynn said. It's there that parasites, diarrhea, and eating problems can be quickly diagnosed.

A typical day for the Zerpheys starts at 5:30 a.m. They spend one hour feeding the animals before they leave the home at 7 a.m. for their printing business. They have a neighbor who looks in on the animals during the day and does odds and ends around the place, but the feeding and care of the animals remains the Zerpheys'. It's 8 p.m. before they return home.

Rotational grazing

The Zerpheys are strong advocates of herding llamas and sheep in the same area. They find that rotational grazing allows them to get the most nutrition out of the pasture.

"This is therapy," said Lynn of the time required to care for the sheep and llamas.

"That makes better use of pasture because sheep and llamas feed on different types of grasses in the pasture," John said. "Diseases are species specific and they don't give worms to each other. Better control of parasites is possible when you raise them together."

Portable fencing allows easy rotation of areas. Every time John spreads manure on the pasture he adds three to four coffee can measures of meadow grass seed, which results in beautiful lush meadows.

Adaptation to farming

The Zerpheys purchased used equipment such as a 1926 Ford tractor and a Sears and Roebuck manure spreader. Because the Zerpheys have about an hour's drive from their work, they often do not arrive home until around 8 p.m.

The day their used tractor was delivered, John was only arriving home from work. While dressed in his suit and tie, he learned to drive a tractor. A memory his wife never lets him forget.

Seminars, voluminous reading, and discussions with members of the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers keep the Zerpheys up to date on such areas as grazing, pasturing, and breeding.

Marketing

Their business backgrounds are beneficial with record keeping and in marketing. The Zerpheys market their own lambs, which are raised without growth enhancers and on unmedicated feed.

"It's the most tender lamb you ever ate," John said. "Our animals are fed well and do not have much fat. They have a meadow in which to exercise, which develops muscle and cuts down on the fat," John said.

"At the market, a lamb brings $60 to $75. If you market it your self, it brings $115 to $150."

For years, the Zerpheys have been planning to print a brochure about Sheepberry Farms to use in marketing lamb and wool, but it's the typical story of "a printer never has time to make his own brochure," said Lynn.

The couple did find time to develop a logo for Sheepberry Farms that illustrates a llama and sheep touching noses.

John plans to mail-order target individuals who can afford and like lamb and to include recipes in the brochure that are easy to prepare.

"We should be handing out lamb samples at physical fitness centers to equate lean lamb with fitness. It's ridiculous to hand out free lamb samples at farm-related meetings to beef and pork farmers," said John, who is full of ideas for expanding marketing capabilities in lamb. He has accumulated recipes to manufacture processed lunch meats, sausages, bologna, and other products from lamb.

"It's a novel thing to market," said Zerphey, who adamantly argues that to entice more consumers to eat lamb, the name must be changed.

Fiber artists

When his wife began working as a fiber artist, it seemed natural for John to become interested also because he works with design, color, and texture every day in his printing business. Much of the same eye for design is needed when working with fiber arts.

When John first began attending a weaving and spinning guild, he was the only male, now several other men attend. John has his own loom set up in an upstairs bedroom.

The Zerpheys provide spinning and weaving demonstrations and participate in sheep-to-shawl competitions. Much of their expertise was gained by studying books on weaving and self teaching, and from some help from a skiing buddy who had taken an art course on weaving.

Several of their projects such as an afghan, sheep throws, and a wool blanket have taken ribbons in local fairs.

The Zerpheys also show their wool at fairs and fiber shows such as York Interstate Fair, Keystone Livestock Expo, Pa. Farm Show, and the Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival. The wool has received many champion and reserve champion ribbons. Much of their wool is sold to other fiber artists, craft persons, and to some small wool mills with an established reputation of clean, quality, healthy wool.

The Zerpheys are chairpersons for the convention of the Greater Appalachian Llama Association to be held in Hershey in September 1993.

"It's the first llama convention to be held in Pennsylvania," John said.

The Zerpheys learned to shear their own sheep. Australian teachers taught Lynn how to grade and pack wool. Recently, she completed the Level I Wool Classer course that the American Sheep Industry Association has developed to improve the wool quality and production of United States' wool. Through a better quality wool clip, U.S. wool growers expect to have a competitive edge to the available domestic and international wool markets. Prior to these courses, few wool producers had a complete knowledge of fiber science and as a result wool classing was inconsistent.

Both sheep and llama wools are used in the Zerpheys' fiber projects.

Llamas have both guard hair, which is stiff and straight and is not used in yarns, and soft down that blends easily with sheep wool, which has more elasticity and crimp. Llama wool makes a lighter and warmer sweater than sheep wool.

The Zerpheys also sell fleeces, which they wash instead of dry clean, which takes out luster.

Rewards of labor

Although it takes more effort for the Zerpheys to do their own marketing and to branch out in so many different aspects in using wool, it makes more money and is worth the effort, said John.

John, who plans to retire from his printing job within a few years, will devote full time to marketing lamb. He also would like to offer one-day llama treks for those interested in the pleasure of sightseeing on a llama.

The work at Sheepberry Farms is never-ending. Since the Zerpheys have fixed up the farm buildings, built a pond, and improved the land, they are now concentrating on restoring the log house in which they live.

"I'm a Jack-of-all-trades, but master of none," John said of his ability to do woodworking, caning, furniture refinishing, remodeling, and other handyman chores.

People wonder how the Zerpheys can hold down full-time jobs and then face so much work on the farm.

Lynn has the answer. "This is therapy," she said as she surveyed the rolling meadows and the neatly painted barns. Sheep and llamas are very calming. After a day of using your brain in the office, physical work is relaxing and rewarding."

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Farm wives have traditionally "worn many hats."

Wife, mother, cook, maid, nurse, chaeuffer, gardener, truck driver, lawn mower, milker, young-stock raiser, vet assistant, accountant, cowboy (cowgirl?), marketer, go-fer (go 'fer this and go 'fer that), equipment operator, computer operator (a newer hat) etc, etc.

We've added another "hat" to our personal collection: chicken doorman.

I never set out purposely to become a chicken doorman. It wasn't like I crawled out of bed one morning and announced, "Today I'm going to work as a chicken doorman." No one plans that kind of job.

But, see, our one lone remaining hen is amazingly spry and sprightly despite her age of several years, a testimony perhaps to the benefits of scratching for a living in the country. And, being the sole recipient of the attentions of our three roosters (a male-female ratio way out of whack, it was inevitable that she would once again hatch a batch of fluffy chicks.

Some of you may recall that, despite the wisdom that usually comes with age, this hen is not the brightest bird in the neighborhood. This time she nested in the middle of the front hay mow, empty when she began but now stuffed with a couple of tons of baled alfalfa. Pushover for pets that he is, The Farmer moved her to the side and stacked bales protectively around her.

A few days later, a half-dozen fluffy yellow, brown and black balls were spotted running around the barn floor. Our mother cats took out a couple of the chicks and I rescued and returned one that fell through a hay hole before the old hen finally settled on a safer haven for the surviving three.

She's claimed a spacious corner pen in "pallet city," temporary quarters for our seasonal overflow of calves. Wooden pallets fastened against the sides of the roofed wagon shed make comfortable pens for the baby calf overflow.

Mother Hen herded her trio through a corner crack between two pallet walls, past the resident calf and settled up under the old floor of the grain storage along the shed's side. A choice spot. Fairly safe from cats and from the foxes, while dry, warm and soft with bedding sawdust.

Except that the calf inside took note of the crack between the pallets and was halfway up the road before being retrieved. The corner gap between the wooden walls was quickly tightened.

Two days later, amazed that the chicks were still there, I realized that the chicken family was imprisoned — and "re-cracked" the corner a big. Momemnts later, our feathered family was outside, the mother clucking, chattering and creating a noisy fuss as her babies scratched for tidbits.

"Stuck in there all this time by these overgrown two-legged monsters!" she seemed to be grumbling. "How's a mother to tend to her family? Over here's some tasty corn and pieces of grain. Stop your fighting over that fly. Share! "Here, you can get a drink where this bucket overflowed. Junior, stop pecking your sister!"

I exited the scolding — in a 'fowl' mood — to go retrieve the escaping calf.

Before long, the family was back in the shed, hunting a way back into their favorite corner. I propped the pallets just far enough apart to allow the hen to slip through, and hoped the calf wouldn't notice the opening. It did.

After two days of this chicken doorman bit, I tied the tops of the pallets together, fastened a feed bag over the upper part of the opening and wedged the bottom apart. The calf would find its exit visually blocked at her eye level, while the feathered family could ome and go at theirs.

This chicken is dumb like a fox — probably why she's still around.

I may take this job and stuff it.

Bread filling would be appropriate.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

When the black van starts going by our house again with Amish school students it impresses on my mind that fall is almost here. Also, our daughter who lives in New Jersey, came to visit for a couple of days with her boys before school started last week. They shopped for school clothes at a large mall near our home and again I am reminded that summer is almost gone.

Our youngest grandchild is one year old and about ready to walk. He enjoyed playing with the pots and pans in my cupboards. And, when I cleaned my goldfish bowl, he managed to reach in and catch the fish that I think is about 20 years old. I have a feeling that the fish is blind, but he manages to find his food anyway.

Our daughter, Nancy, brough us about two bushel of nice red apples from her backyard in a suburb. They give me the prettiest pink applesauce to freeze. We sent potatoes, tomatoes, beans and cantaloupe home with her as we do have an abundance of these things. She tells me that she likes the basil that I raise and she uses it for a pesto. This summer I have more than I can use so I've given some to neighbors too.

This year I have squash of every shape and color. Only the butternut is true to form. You see, I saved seed from last years crops and apparently they cross-pollinated and now we can't eat some of them as they are stringy. These ornamentals are tiny like party pan types but are colored green, white and orange. This is one disadvantage of saving your own seed but I'm not too disappointed as they will make nice decorations.

Keep Condiments Cold

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — You probably can't find a kitchen in America that doesn't have a jar of mustard, catsup or pickles in the refrigerator or on the shelf. During the summer one or the other of these condiments seems to show up at practically every meal. Summer meals, especially if eaten outdoors, just don't seem complete without the relish catsup, etc.

Each year the Wayne County Extension Office gets questions about wheather these foods have to be refrigerated. The question comes up because people attend picnics or parties where these foods are left out on the table during the day. The acidity of these condiments will slow down the growth of bacteria and yeast according to Dr. Gerald Kuhn, Penn State food scientist. But he cautions some molds can grow on the surface of these foods.

Therefore, Kuhn recommends that once opened, catsup, mustard, pickles, olives and relishes be refrigerated. At picnics or other outside events, they should not be out of the cooler for more than two hours. Be sure there is plenty of ice in the cooler and keep the cooler out of the sun.

Keeping these popular meal additions on ice or in the refrigerator will ensure that they are safe to eat. In addition you'll find your family and friends will appreciate cool, crisp pickles and relishes and cool, tightly capped mustard and catsup. Play it safe with your food this summer.

If you have questions or comments regarding this article or would like more information please contact Debra Bryant, Penn State Extension Agent 925 Court Street, Honesdale, PA 18431, (717)253-5970, ext. 239.

Golden Touch Of Honey

Those who believe honey is only for breakfast toast are in for a surprise. Honey can be substituted for sugar in almost any recipe. An advantage of cooking with honey is that it is a natural preservative and foods made with it, especially baked goods, retain their freshness longer.

• When you substitute honey for granulated sugar in recipes; substitute honey for up to one-half of the sugar. With experimentation, honey can be substituted for all the sugar in some recipes.

Reduce the amount of liquid in the recipe by ¼ cup for each cup of honey used in baked goods. Add about ½ teaspoon baking soda for each cup of honey used in baked goods. Reduce oven temperature 25 degrees to prevent overbrowning of baked goods.

For easy removal, spray measuring cup with vegetable cooking spray before adding honey.

• Honey adds a sweet, smooth and distinctive taste to recipes. Honey also absorbs and retains moisture. These qualities retard drying out and staling of baked goods.

• A 12-ounce jar of honey equals a standard measuring cup.

• Because of its high fructose content, honey has a higher sweetening power than sugar.

Buying and Storage Tips

• Select mildly flavored honeys, such as clover, for use in cooking where delicate flavors predominate.

• Use strongly flavored honeys in spreads or other recipes where a distinct honey flavor is desired.

• Store honey at room temperature.

• If honey crystallizes, remove lid and place jar in warm water until crystals dissolve. Or, microcook 1 cup of honey in microwave safe container at high for 2 to 3 minutes or until crystals dissolve; stir every 30 seconds. Do not boil or scorch.

TANGY HONEY SAUCE FOR MEAT AND CHICKEN

1 cup catsup
¼ cup honey
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg

Combine catsup, honey, mustard, and nutmeg; mix thoroughly. Makes 1¼ cups.

Serving tip: Spread on meatloaf, pork loin, ribs or chicken pieces during last 15 minutes of baking or serve as a dipping sauce.

HONEY WHOLE WHEAT BREAD

Combine in mixing bowl:
3 cups whole wheat flour
½ cup nonfat dry milk
1 tablespoon salt
2 packages dry yeast

Heat in a saucepan until warm:
3 cups water
½ cup honey
2 tablespoons oil

Pour warm liquid over flour mixture. Beat with electric mixer or stir by hand. Stir in:
1 additional cup whole wheat flour
4-4½ cups white flour

Knead 5 minutes, using additional white flour if necessary. Place in greased bowl, turn, let rise until double in bulk. Punch down, divide dough in half and shape into loaves. Place in greased bread pans. Cover and let rise 40 to 45 minutes. Bake at 375 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes. Makes 2 loaves.

Featured Recipe

In 1928, the Republican Party promised a "chicken in every pot" if its candidate were elected. The cost of chicken to consumers today is only a fraction of the cost in 1928 when chicken was a luxury item, eaten only for Sunday dinner or special occasions. But politicians then as they are today were telling voters that a vote for them is a vote for a better life.

Chicken is still an appropriate symbol of that pledge. And on the good nutrition, good taste, and good value platform, more consumers than ever are voting chicken.

This election year, when the nation's slumping economy is of major importance to voters, dark meat chicken is a real vote getter for those concerned about both good nutrition and budget balancing.

The National Broiler Council developed the following recipe using dark meat chicken, the best value in the supermarket case. It is a hearty dish with sure-to-please Italian seasoning. It's simple to put together, place in the oven and forget until serving time. Add a salad and the meal is complete.

SPAGHETTI CHICKEN DRUMSTICKS

8 broiler-fryer chicken drumsticks
8 ounces fresh mushrooms, sliced
1 large onion, sliced
1 large clove garlic, minced
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon oregano
1 teaspoon basil
16-ounce can tomatoes
15-ounce can tomato sauce
8-ounces thin spaghetti, cooked

In 2-quart shallow baking dish, place sliced mushrooms in a single layer. Separate sliced onion into rings and arrange over mushrooms. Place drumsticks on top of onion and sprinkle with minced garlic, salt, oregano, and basil. Drain juice from tomatoes and pour juice over chicken. Mash tomatoes with a fork or place in processor container and process 15 seconds; pour over drumsticks. Pour canned tomato sauce over all, covering drumsticks well. Place baking dish on a sided cookie sheet and bake in 400 degree oven for 1 hour or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Serve over cooked spaghetti. Makes 4 servings.

Harford Fair Queen Chosen From Nine Contestants

RONALD D. CLARK
Susquehanna Co. Correspondent

HARFORD (Susquehanna Co.) — Nine contestants reached the finals of the first Harford Fair Queen competition. Judged to be the winner of the contest was April Beeman, daughter of William and Virginia Beeman, Kingsley.

The Pennsylvania State County Fair Queen, Cheryl Muraski of Matamoras, placed the tiara and band on the new Queen, and proclaimed her the honor that was due her. Alternate Harford Fair Queen was Rebecca Lopatofsky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Lopatofsky of Uniondale.

To qualify for the prestigious position, the candidates submitted a written essay focusing on their special interest. Each candidate must undergo an extensive interview by the judges, who consider each girl's poise, appearance, and her ability to communicate. The final consideration is in a public forum, where each candidate must give a two- to three-minute talk on the subject, "Why You Should Come To My Fair." Following this, each contestant draws a random question which must be answered off-the-cuff, and the judges consider these answers as a part of the overall qualifications. It is also important that the successful Queen and her Alternate have knowledge of agriculture and of the Susquehanna County area.

Judges for the competition were Cheryl Muraski, the Pennsylvania State County Fair Queen; Michael Franceski, president of the Forest City Commercial Association; and Kenneth Lee, the region's Representative in the State Legislature.

April Beeman is 17 years old, and is planning to attend college. She intends to earn a degree in Political Science and then pursue a broadcasting career, or perhaps go to law school, become an attorney, and work for agricultural lobbying.

She is a member of the National Honor Society, and the French Honor Society. In school she participated in many extracurricular activities, including girls' basketball, manager of the boys' basketball team, track and field events, the school band and chorus, the yearbook staff, the defense attorney team, as well as dramas, student council, and the prom committee.

April has earned many honors. These include the County Band and the County Chorus, the Marywood Youth Honors Band, the Cedarville Youth choir, and the Minico scholarship. She earned varsity letters in track and basketball, and placed first in a Talents for Christ contest.

She numbers among her community activities active membership in the 4-H Club, the Dairylee Young Peoples' Cooperative, and the Springville Baptist Church.

April is a 1992 graduate of the Mountain View High School. Her parents operate a dairy farm, with a milking herd of 70 cows, and a total of 130 head.

The Alternate Harford Fair Queen, Rebecca Lopatofsky, is 18, and a graduate of Mountain View High School. Her parents operate a propane gas outlet, and furnish gas appliances for farm, home and industry.

Rebecca intends to become a surgeon. She won a scholarship to St. Vincent's College, in Latrobe, where she will begin her studies this fall. She is a member of the National Honor Society.

Her achievements while in school include expertise in music, and she has entertained in many local events. She was a Rotary Student of the Month. She performed as a member of the District Band and Chorus. Other extracurricular activities were field hockey, basketball, and track and field sports.

Rebecca was a participant in the Harford Bicentennial which took place two years ago. She was a contestant in the Susquehanna County Dairy Princess Contest, and is a volunteer for the Clifford Fire Company Picnic.

Other candidates in the Fair Queen Pageant were: Beth Burchell, Susquehanna, daughter of James and Susan Burchell; Andrea Lynn Daniels, New Milford, daughter of Robert and Judith Daniels; Dana Harvatine, Thompson, daughter of Carl and Nancy Harvatine; Kimberly Hayden, Hop Bottom, daughter of Jack and Susan Rookstool; Stacy Hunsinger, Brooklyn, daughter of Richard and Ruth Hunsinger; Barbara Ryan, Montrose, daughter of Anna May and Fred Kruemberg; and Theresa Supancik, Uniondale, daughter of Frank and Betsy Supancik.

Double Fun For Witmer Twins And Brother Derek

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Double fun is what Danae and Danette Witmer have on their Manheim farm. The 6-year-old twins and their brother Derek, 3, find lots of exciting things to do on their 200-acre farm.

Their parents, Natalie and Darrel, raise alfalfa, hay, and wheat. They milk 65 Holsteins and raise heifers and bull calves on the farm.

Each morning, the childrens' mother helps in the barn. While their mother is busy in the barn, Danae, Danette, and Derek ride bikes on their long macadam driveway, play with their eight cats, or climb into their tree house.

When their mother works in the house, the twins and their brother are big helpers. They especially like to make cookies, applesauce, and tomato juice.

When their mother makes either applesauce or tomato juice, the children crank the handle which grinds the apples or tomatoes. The children take turns cranking, which teaches them to wait patiently for their turn.

The twins are not identical in looks. Danae has blond hair and blue eyes. Danette and light brown hair and dark brown eyes. Sometimes the twins dress alike, but not always.

This week, the twins started going to school in East Petersburg. They are in separate classrooms so that they will make other friends instead of only playing with each other.

But afterschool, the twins continue to have plenty of time to play together and to help their mother. Here is their favorite cookie recipe. The twins and their brother like to roll the dough in balls, shake them in a cinnamon-sugar mixture, and place them on a cookie sheet.

The twins believe that other children will enjoy helping their mothers make Snickerdoddles.

SNICKERDODDLES

4cup shortening
1½ cups sugar
2¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ cup butter
2 eggs
2 teaspoons cream of tartar
¼ teaspoon salt

Mis shortening, butter, sugar, and eggs. Add remaining ingredients. Roll into balls the size of small walnuts. Roll into the following mixture:

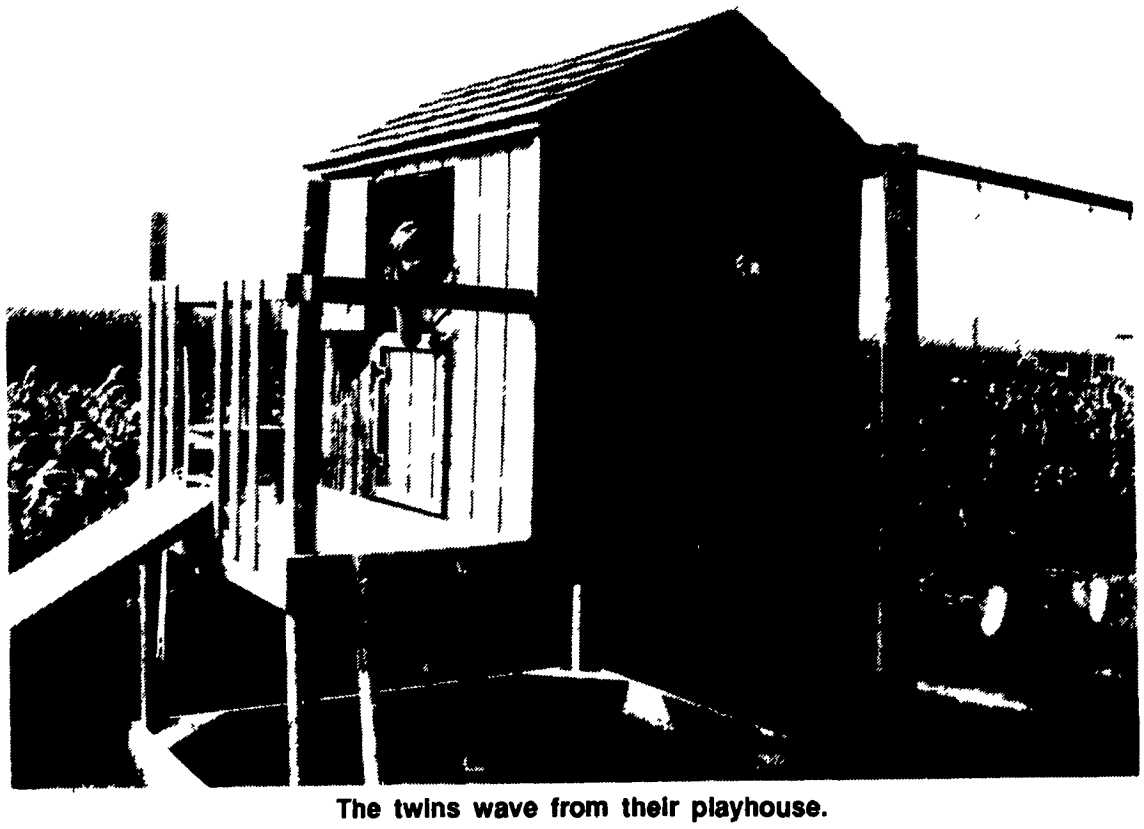
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon

Place 2 inches apart on ungreased baking sheet. Bake at 400 degrees for 8 to 10 minutes or until lightly browned but soft. Makes 5 dozen 2-inch cookies.

The Witmer family includes from left: Danae, Derek, and Danette with parents Darrel and Natalie.

Derek takes a turn cranking the applesauce while his sisters wait impatiently to turn.

Cookie baking time is a family affair when Natalie Witmer stirs up some batter. From left: Derek, 3; Danae, 6; and Danette, 6.



The twins wave from their playhouse.

Bedford County 4-H'ers Present One-Act Play

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Something new was added to the Bedford Fair this year. Bedford County 4-H Players presented "Beware the Genies," at the 4-H Center as a part of the fair.

Director Alecia Gibson, a summer intern at the local extension office, chose and directed the one-act play, which involved the importance of recycling and taking care of the earth on which we live.

Gibson, a student at Shippensburg University, majoring in communications and public relations, said she appreciated all of the help given to her in this first time venture.

Local theatre actors, Bill Snyder, and Dick Rice gave of their time to talk to the aspiring thespians about acting.

Old Bedford Village loaned equipment and gave advice; Cathy Clevenger helped with photography and props; and all parents pitched in to do their part.

Members of the club and cast included Misty Karns, Lacey Madore, Andrea Cragan, Willow Abrams, Alison Hershberger, Elisha Seager, Jessica Perrin, Christopher Nave, and Aleecha Jones.

The Cave family was played by Jessica Perrin, Christopher Nave, and Aleecha Jones.

Some of the members were asked to play multiple roles.

The club members made all of their own props and became quite creative by making a curtain which rose from a clothesline pulley.

More performances from this group of young actors and actresses will be forthcoming.

How To Make A Good Salsa

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Americans love salsa...so much so that this tangy condiment surpassed ketchup last year in pounds consumed per person. Now that tomatoes and peppers are overflowing in home gardens, it is a good time to try your hand at making and putting up your own.

Most salsa recipes are a mixture of tomatoes, onions, peppers and spices. If made with a sufficient amount of acidic ingredients (tomatoes, lemon juice, vinegar), salsa can be processed safely in a boiling water canner. Without sufficient acid, use a pressure canner.

The type of tomato you use in making salsa will affect its quality. Paste tomatoes, such as Roma, have firmer flesh and produce thicker salsa than large slicing tomatoes. Although both types make good salsa, slicing tomatoes usually yield a thinner, more watery salsa than paste tomatoes. Salsa can be thickened by adding tomato paste.

Peppers range from mild to fiery in taste. Very hot peppers are usually small and provide a distinct taste to salsa. Jalapeno is the most popular hot pepper. Other favorites include Serrano, Cayenne, Habanero and Tabasco. Be sure to use rubber gloves when cutting or dicing hot peppers because they can cause extreme irritation to the skin. Be especially careful not to touch your face, particularly the area around your eyes, when you are working with hot peppers.

It is important that salsas processed in a boiling water canner contain an acid ingredient such as lemon juice or vinegar. Without sufficient acid, the product has the potential to support the growth of Clostridium botulinum. Lemon juice often is the acid of choice because it is more acidic and has less effect on flavor than vinegar. It also adds vitamin C to the recipe.

Here is a recipe for salsa that you might want to try.

Chile Salsa

5 pounds tomatoes
2 pounds chile peppers
1 pound onions
1 cup vinegar (5%)
3 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper

Caution: Wear rubber gloves while handling chiles; do not touch your face or eyes and wash hands thoroughly with soap and water when finished. Wash and dry chiles; slit each pepper on its side to allow steam to escape. Place chiles in 400° oven or boiler for 6-8 minutes until skins blister. Allow peppers to cool. Place in a pan and cover with a damp cloth. This will make peeling the peppers easier. After several minutes, peel each pepper. Cool and slip off skins. Discard seeds and chop peppers. Wash tomatoes and dip in boiling water for 30-60 seconds or until skins split. Dip in cold water, slip off skins and remove cores. Coarsely chop tomatoes and combine with chopped peppers, onions, and remaining ingredients in a large saucepan. Heat to boiling; simmer 10 minutes. Fill sterilized canning jars (pints), leaving ½ inch headspace. Adjust lids and process in boiling water bath for 15 minutes. Yield: 6-8 pints.

Novel Idea Launches 'Entrepremanureship'

PooPet Sculptures For Lawn, Garden, Potted Plants

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

BIRD-IN-HAND (Lancaster Co.) — Manure is smelly, dirty, and ugly — unless John Rothman gets his hands on it. The New Jersey businessman turns manure into cute, clean, whisimical figurines that have a function in addition to decorum — provide fertilizer to lawn, garden, and potted plants.

Rothman, who has a pharmacology background, left his job as former senior director of clincal drug development for a major pharmaceutical company, with the idea of turning manure into a profitable business.

About three months ago, Rothman got the idea for self-fertilizing sculptures when he watched an artist sculpting with manure in Cape Cod. Rothman decided if he could make the sculptures cheap enough and sell them for about $10 each, the organic little creatures would appeal to upscale clientel who are interested in earth-friendly products.

Rothman's original idea was an oversimplification of the process needed to turn manure into a viable product, but through hard work, determination, and the help of Sam Fisher of Gap, Rothman has launched a line of PooPets under the imprint of Tewksbury Gardens.

The chemical aspect of the figurines allows them to retain their form while the fertilizer is leeched out from high humidity or as it is watered or rained upon. Although the fertilizer leeches out, the fiber retains the shape of the figure that is of stone-like texture.

Rothman, who lives in New Jersey, chose Lancaster County as the appropriate place to launch a business based on manure, because he questioned, "What area has more manure than Lancaster County?"

What Rothman did not realize until he began experimenting with the project is that all manure is not created equal. The manure of a cow depends on the metabolic state of the animal, the environment, and the feed. Manure from a lactating cow is too messy, too fibrous. Manure from a non-lactating cow that is fed grain, not hay, has possibilities after it is processed in a cement mixer. The cement mixer kneads and mixes the manure while drying it. The drying process also helps rid the manure of insects that feed on manure.

The idea for using a cement mixer originated with Sam Fisher of Gap.

"Sam has added as much to this project as I have," Rothman said. Consequently, Rothman appointed Fisher production manager. Although it is a part-time position for Fisher, he shares Rothman's enthusiasm for the project.

Fisher said that as soon as he had read an ad Rothman had placed in Lancaster Farming requesting people to mold figurines, he understood the concept.

"I grew up working in my father's greenhouse so I as soon as I read the ad, I figured he was using the concept of diffusion through water for slow fertilization. When fertilizer is released in a controlled method over a period of time, it doesn't burn the plant."

Fisher's background in construction also proved beneficial, for he immediately thought of using a cement mixer to knead and dry the manure.

When the manure is the proper consistency, it is placed in covered buckets until it ready to be formed into molds.

The molds that Rothman first used were not suitable. "As the figurines dried, they became smaller and smaller," he said. A turtle that takes 3½ pounds of manure to mold dries to a weight of .8 pound.

Rothman's wife, a trained studio artist who had no background in mold making, began experimenting with mold making. "Our basement now looks like the North Pole with plaster of Paris everywhere," Rothman said.

Her efforts have produced usable molds to shape turtle, quail, rabbit, and frog.

By using the molds, Rothman estimates that he can form a PooPet in three to seven minutes. Beans are used for eyes and a mixture of cottage cheese and lime is

(Turn to Page B15)

Sam Fisher, production manager, and John Rothman, president of Tewksbury Gardens that manufactures manure figurines, hold one of the self-fertilizing sculpture, a turtle, which serves as a planter.

Made from 100 percent cow manure, beans for eyes, lime and cottage cheese white wash, PooPets are advertized to be the safe, natural, organic, biodegradeable, the finest fertilizer available.

John Rothman presses manure in a mold to make a PooPet. Rothman, a former director of a pharmatucial company, said his idea for making the manure figurines is similar to making bricks from manure.

The manure is prepared for sculpting by Sam Fisher, who places the manure in a cement mixer for drying and kneading. Fisher claims making manure figurines is a cleaner job than his previous ones of working on a farm, in a greenhouse, and in construction.

Place PooPets in dirt over roots for more than a year's fertilization. Water over PooPet, which will last for years if kept outdoors, forever if kept indoors.

ised to whitewash markings on the uail. As soon as the shape is ormed, the figurine, which is of lay consistency, is set on a drying ack.

Drying was another obstacle hat Rothman faced. It takes months if the figurine is left to air dry, but if dried too quickly in a heated area, the figurines will crack or burn. Through trial and error, Rothman has perfected a controlled time element, which dries the figurines in about 10 days.

When dry, the figurines have a stonelike appearance in muted shades of brown and gray.

"It's safe, natural, organic, and biodegradeable — the finest fertilizer available," Rothman said as he held up a completed PooPet.

To some people, making manure figurines sounds like a smelly process, but Rothman points out that making bricks from manure has been done since time memorial. His figurines have the same qualities as weatherproof bricks. They are nonporous and will last for years.

Currently, Rothman rents a barn from an Amish family in Bird-In-Hand, where he works when he is in the area. He has several people working from their homes who form the PooPets. Rothman provides prepared manure. He pays an average of 75 cents for each completed PooPet.

"With experience, a person can earn $9 to $12 an hour," Rothman said.

At this point, Rothman has no limit on the amount of figurines that employees can make.

"We are hopefully in an explosive growth phase," said Rothman, who recently returned from the International Gift Fair held in New York. From that contact, he said that he received orders for thousands of dollars of figurines. Special requests came for manure-made armadillos for Texas and alligators for Florida.

"Cost factors must be taken into account," Rothman said. "Larger pieces are much more difficult to dry and have a tendency to break during the process."

But Rothman is optimistic. If network marketing continues to be successful, he expects to buy a building in the county and go to a production line assembly.

"When people see the figurines, they want them. The key to making them desirable is to give the PooPets expression. The figurines need pizazz — something that says 'I'm cute.'"

It has only been three months since Rothman had the idea for marketing manure figurines. Although it is a much more complicated process than Rothman originally envisioned, he said, "We defined the technology and solved the problems in producing the figurines. The key now is distribution."

Rothman continues to dream. He said, "Our next step is to biologically alter the cattle to leave finished figurines in the field."

Rothman can be contacted at 51 R Bissell Rd., Lebanon, NJ 08833 or by phone (908) 236-0885.

Ask The Master Food Preserver

Last year my canned corn lacked flavor and was browner than usual. How can I avoid this?

Answer: Assuming that you followed proper canning procedures such as hot packing and processing in a pressure canner for the recommended period of time, and started with corn at its peak of flavor, it is probably due to the variety of corn you canned. Many of the newer, sweeter varieties are not the best to can since they have a higher sugar content and tend to turn brown and lose their flavor when canned.

Is it all right to can meat in a thicker gravy rather than water?

Answer: No, we do not recommend canning meats in gravy since they heat more slowly and unevenly and the result is inadequate processing. It could definitely result in food spoilage and a risk to your family.

Whom can I call when I have a canning question?

We have three trained volunteers available to answer your questions. They are Eleanor and Bryan Heckman at (814) 266-7874 and Helen Kalinoski at (814) 736-8028. Try between 10 a.m. and 8 p.m. or if they aren't available call our office at (814) 472-7986 between 9 a.m.-12:30 p.m. and 1:00 p.m.-4:00 p.m.

TAKING TIME

by Rebecca Escott

Extension Home Economist

It seems like this last month, I have had to put to use a lot of the lessons I constantly am sharing with other families.

This past weekend my waffle iron died. I spent $60 on it less than six months ago and maybe used it a half dozen times. I was angry, and I had to think. "Do what you tell others to do."

So I cleaned the appliance. Found the recipe booklet and receipt from the store. (It's a good thing I'm in the habit of keeping receipts... But I found out later I should have saved the box, too.) I took it back to the store and confidently asked to speak with a manager.

In the back of my mind, I kept repeating the age-old techniques of effective complaints:

- Speak calmly and slowly.
- State the exact problem. Give as much pertinent information as possible (about when, where you purchased the item; when, how you noticed the problem, etc.)
- Do your homework. (Have the receipt or other verifying paperwork with you. I strolled around the store, found the exact same model selling for the same price, and read a two-year limited warranty notice on the box flap.)
- Suggest an appropriate action for the other party to take. I asked if it was possible to exchange this damaged appliance for a new one. Fortunately, the store was willing to do this, and I didn't have to go through the process of contacting the manufacturer.

But it was good to get back to practicing a few of the principles I teach on a regular basis. I started wondering how many people would simply have junked the appliance instead of speaking up and getting some satisfaction from the business or company involved.

The second area I began to experience the reality of my own principles was family budgeting. For two weeks, I've been teaching workshops at an area company about "Balancing the Two-Week Pay Check." I talked about how to look ahead, discuss expenses, and to regularly save to cover occasional bills.

Well, just to keep me honest, my family experienced several unusual challenges to our budget. First, because of some of my own misfiguring, we nearly overdrew our account and needed to transfer some funds quickly. I'm glad I check the accounts regularly so the checks didn't bounce. Then we had the "opportunity" to join some friends for a concert and dinner — to the tune of almost $75. My husband I really wrestled with that choice. Did we really want to go? Would we rather use the money in another way? Did we have that kind of money to spend at this late point in the month? We went, and we were glad. Yes, and we paid for the tickets in cash.

The last glitch same on the day we had intended to order carpet for our bedroom. My husband calmly mentioned to me that rumors were circulating at work about lay-offs (just one week after I wrote the last column about losing jobs)! By the end of the day, he had survived a 10% across-the-board cut. We deposited his pay check and ordered carpet — on sale.

This past month was a good reminder to me of how important it is to practice the principles I preach. This time things worked well. It may not always be the case but I am glad that I get to live and walk the lessons that I share with others. It keeps me honest. I really can appreciate other families' challenges, too.

Berks County Extension Home Economist Faye Strickler Answers Questions

I bought self-rising flour by mistake. What other ingredients have been added to all purpose flour to make it self-rising?

Exactly 1 ½ teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt have been pre-blended into each cup of enriched self-rising flour or corn meal to save mixing and measuring steps and prevent mistakes.

Why doesn't my new refrigerator have a molded egg compartment on the door?

Home economists have found that, since egg shells are porous, eggs deteriorate much faster when they're left uncovered in the door. To prevent moisture loss, it's recommended that eggs be kept in their carton.

Consumers also told manufacturers that they wanted to be able to use the door space for other items, since some people don't use eggs. So they made the inner door panels more flexible and spacious to accommodate 2-liter bottles and gallon milk and juice containers.

I recently bought my daughter a microwave which is rated at 800 watts, but it doesn't cook any faster than my older 650 watt oven. What's going on?

In 1990 the Department of Energy set standards for measuring microwave power by adopting an internationally recognized testing procedure call "IEC-705" which changes the wattage rating. For instance, a microwave made before the new standards might be rated at 650 watts like yours, while the same microwave made after 1990 would read 800 watts like your daughter's. But there is no actual change in power or cooking performance. The new rating method results in designations of approximately 50-150 watts higher than the old standards.

Just be aware that for some time, microwaves made before and after the new standards will be on store shelves at the same time. You'll need to read the serial plate to know when it was manufactured, and that will help you tell what rating system was used.

Food Is A Good Buy

The University of Minnesota recently released information about food expenditures by families and individuals in the United States and in other countries.

Food expenditures as a share of disposable personal United States income decreased from 22.1% in 1949 to 11.8% in 1990. The largest decrease was in money spent for food consumed at home, which decreased from 18% to 7.3%. Percent of income spent for food consumed away from home increased from 4% in 1949 to 4.5% in 1990.

Americans currently spend 8.4% of their total personal expenditures on food consumed at home, which is the lowest percentage of any other country surveyed.

Some other interesting information released:

Households with incomes more than $50,000 per year spent 9.9% of their income on food, whereas lower income families (with incomes less than $10,000) spent more than 30% on food.

From 1960 to 1990 the percent of married women employed increased from 31.9% to 57.8%. Three out of every four women from 35 to 44 years of age are presently in the labor force. Surveys indicate that women still do over 90% of the cooking in American homes, and time-pressured consumers do not wish to purchase ingredients to prepare meals from scratch; they want a "heat and serve meal."

Approximately 76% of American households have microwave ovens, which has increased the demand for convenience meals either as home delivery of take-out-to-eat food. The use of microwave cookery reduces time and energy in food preparation.

Food scientists are being asked to develop products with specific attributes which consumers desire. In 1989, approximately 9,200 new food products were marketed. Although convenience is one of the main incentives for new product development, low-fat or non-fat products are also being emphasized. Diet and nutritional considerations are a motivating factor, but most consumers still want products which do not sacrifice taste and quality.

In 1988, more than 11 billion dollars were spent on food-related advertising. Competition for the consumer's dollars is keen, and the objective of advertising is to create a specific desirable impression for the company's product.

Considering the desires of the consumer, food safety, and other factors, it is obvious that the food industry will undergo many changes in the next few years. The role of the American housewife has changed, and will affect future food buying preparation, and consumption habits.

4-H HAPPENINGS

1992 4-H Fair Costume Calf Contest, Adams County 4-H members Jonathan Murren (left) and Jesse Murren came up with the winning Dairy Calf Costume contest. They were assisted by County Commissioner Richard Waybright, holding the calf. Other dignitaries helping with the contest were: County Treasurer George Stock (center) and Congressman Bill Goodling (right).

Montgomery County Dairy 4-H'ers Compete

CREAMERY (Montgomery Co.) — The Montgomery County 4-H Dairy Show was held recently at the Montgomery County 4-H Center as part of the 4-H Fair.

A total of 44 animals with all six major dairy breeds represented were exhibited by 18 members of the Montgomery County 4-H Dairy Club.

The dairy cattle were judged for type (body structure) and fitting (how well the animal is groomed). In addition, each 4-H'er was judged on their ability to show their bovine during the contest.

This year, a supreme champion of all six breeds was named at the show. Receiving top honors was Amy Plummer of Chalfont who exhibited a junior 2-year-old Jersey. One gallon of milk from this Jersey was later auctioned off to the top bidder, Merrymead Farm, for $600 as part of Montgomery County's Market Animal Sale.

Holsteins exhibited by Drew Sterner of Bechtelsville and Zachary Quigley of Lansdale were the Holstein grand champion and reserve, respectively. Grand and reserve grand champion for the 5 color breeds are as follows: Ayrshire, Seth Wolfgang of Bechtelsville; Brown Swiss, Jonathan and Katie Sterner of Bechtelsville; Guernsey, Rebecca Myers of Green Lane and Karen Wolfgang of Bechtelsville; Jersey, Amy and Paul Plummer of Chalfont; Milking Shorthorn, Danielle Breaux of Salfordville.

The fitting and showing portion of the dairy show was divided into two age groups, juniors ages of 8-13 and seniors ages 14-19. Zachary Quigley of Lansdale received junior fitting honors and Karen Wolfgang of Bechtelsville received reserve. Junior showman awards were won by Zach Quigley of Lansdale and Lizzie Moser of Gilbertsville. For the Senior 4-H'ers, Paul and Amy Plummer won first and second place in the fitting contest, and Amy Plummer and Drew Sterner of Bechtelsville won first and second place in the showman contest.

All blue ribbon animals were eligible for the Southeastern District Dairy Show, with participants representing nine counties. Montgomery County 4-H'ers fared well at the district dairy show held August 21 at Kutztown. Ayrshire grand champion was exhibited by Seth Wolfgang. Brown Swiss reserve junior champion was exhibited by Jonathan Sterner. Jersey grand champion was exhibited by Amy Plummer and the reserve junior champion animal was exhibited by Paul Plummer.

Ten Montgomery County 4-H'ers are eligible to compete in the Pennsylvania Junior Dairy Show, which will be held Monday, September 21 at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg. Eligible 4-Hers include Danielle Breaux, Rebecca Myers, Amy Plummer, Paul Plummer, Zachary Quigley, Drew Sterner, Jonathan Sterner, Katie Sterner, Karen Wolfgang, and Seth Wolfgang.

All participants of the 4-H dairy show were required to complete a project book for each animal. The 4-H dairy experience helps teach the basics in how to care for animals and the economics involved with raising dairy animals. For more information on Montgomery County's 4-H dairy program, contact Tim Fritz at (215)489-4315.

WARREN (Warren Co.) — Two Warren County 4-H families hosted Japanese visitors this past month. Shown, from the left, is Wendy Gilkinson who hosted and Rie Kato of Kyoto-fu Japan, and Jamie Salapek who hosted Hiroko Yamanashi of Kanagawa-ken, Japan. The visitors are shown donning Japanese traditional dress at an exhibition at the 4-H Center in Pittsfield.

Making Fitness Fun.

Troy Onink, an exercise physiologist from Sugar Grove, is shown giving instruction to several 4-H'ers at this year's 4-H Summer Camp.

According to Sanford Smith, Warren County extension agent and 4-H camp director, each summer, two one-week 4-H Camps are conducted for 4-H club members from from a 10-county area in northwestern Pennsylvania.

In line with this year's camp theme of "The Summer Olympics," Onink gave a presentation to the 4-H'ers on the importance of maintaining good physical condition throughout life. This year, nearly 400 4-H'ers attended camp. Warren County 4-H programs are open to Warren County residents ages 8-19 years of age. For more information, contact the County Extension Office at (814)723-6003.

Moisture Content Crucial In Silage

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A few weeks before harvesting corn that will be used for silage, growers should start monitoring its moisture content, recommends a Penn State corn management specialist.

"Moisture content at harvest time is one of the most important factors influencing corn silage quality," said Dr. Greg Roth, assistant professor of corn management in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

When corn silage is too dry, it creates excessive air space in silos and encourages mold to grow. When it's too wet, it leaches nutrients, sours, and becomes unpalatable for livestock.

"As harvest time nears, corn plants begin losing moisture by adult one-half of one percent each day," said Roth. "By checking the moisture content every few days, you can estimate the ideal time to harvest."

Growers can check moisture content by chopping up a sample corn plant and drying it in a forage moisture tester or microwave oven. Information about obtaining and using a forage moisture tester is available at Penn State Cooperative Extension offices.

When using a microwave oven to check moisture, weigh a portion of the chopped plant, then place it in the microwave with a glass of water. Heat the corn at the high setting for two-minute intervals until the corn feels completely dry. "By weighing the dried sample, you can tell how much of it was water," said Roth.

The difference between the two weights can be converted into a percentage. "Recommended percentages vary depending on the type of storage," said Roth. "For upright silos, 63 to 68 percent is recommended. For horizontal silos, 65 to 70 percent is recommended, and 55 to 60 percent is recommended for limited-oxygen silos."

Moisture content also can be estimated by examining corn kernels. Kernels have a milk line, a separation between the hardened starch at the crown and the milky portion near the base. As corn matures, more of the kernel hardens, and the milk line descends toward the base.

"For bunker or upright silos, corn should be harvested when the milk line is about one-third of the way from the crown to the base," said Roth. "When the milk line is midway, the plant's moisture content is ideal for storage in airtight silos."

When the milk line reaches the kernel's base, a black layer forms there, and the digestibility of the stover is reduced. "Corn at this stage should be harvested without delay," said Roth. "It still can be ensiled, but the risk of abnormal fermentation is increased."

Weather can affect the rate of corn's moisture loss. "After an extremely dry growing season, moisture content may be 5 to 10 percent lower at any given stage of maturity, and corn may be ready for harvest a lot sooner," said Roth. "Excessive rainfall may slow down moisture loss and delay harvesting."

Corn was late developing this year due to the cold spring. Because of this, farmers in some areas may need to delay harvest or harvest after frost. "Frosted corn tends to have too much moisture," says Roth. "If this is the case, allow the corn to dry out as much as possible before harvesting.

"In all cases, use the condition of the crop, not the calendar, as your guide."

THE NUTRITIONAL VALUE OF POULTRY MEAT — PART I FAT AND CHOLESTEROL CONTENT

Dr. Regina Vasilatos-Younken
Associate Professor
Poultry Science

The growing concern among consumers for food products that are perceived as healthy and nutritious has and will continue to influence the retail market for poultry products.

In order to sustain and preferably expand beyond the success already experienced by the poultry industry, producers and processors must recognize the nutritional needs of the American public and the relative contribution which poultry meat can make.

Because of studies linking dietary intake of fat with atherosclerosis and certain forms of cancer, the National Research Council and other recognized health organizations have recommended a reduction in the amount of fat consumed by Americans from the current average level of approximately 40 percent of dietary calories to less than 30 percent.

In addition, it is recommended that less than 10 percent of calories be derived from saturated fats. Characteristically, saturated fats are "solid" in consistency at room temperature, whereas the more unsaturated fats (eg, polyunsaturates) tend to be more liquid or oily.

Constant bombardment of consumers with nutritional recommendations to reduce fat and cholesterol intake occurs through the media and by means of food product labelling and advertising. Reflecting the impact of such efforts, it is estimated that ¾ of all consumers consider nutrition in their food purchasing decisions, with 30 percent specifically concerned with fat and cholesterol.

Ironically, although nutritional recommendations are to reduce the total quantity of animal products consumed, per capita total meat consumption has steadily increased, with 213 pounds per capita consumed in the latter part of the 1980s, and projections for this to increase an additional 10 pounds per capita over this decade.

However, in response to the emphasis on reducing fat and cholesterol intake, the proportion of red meats versus poultry consumed has changed dramatically, with poultry continuing to increase its market share, and a projection that this share will reach 45 percent of total per capita meat consumption in the 1990s. This increase in poultry consumption reflects both the competitive price of poultry meat at the retail level, and a perception that poultry meat is "better" than red meats because it is lower in fat and cholesterol — a perception that will be explored in this column.

Poultry makes a significant contribution to the American diet, particularly in terms of protein, niacin, and vitamin B6. The nutritional content of poultry meat products can vary substantially with portion (for example, breast versus thigh) and method of preparation. For example, frying (batter-dipped) can increase the calorie content by more than 30 percent and almost double the total fat content of a given portion.

Perhaps the greatest areas of misunderstanding with regard to the nutritional value of meat products are those of cholesterol and of fat composition. Cholesterol is synthesized in animal tissues (primarily in the liver and intestine, but also in peripheral tissues) and is present mainly as a constituent of both interior and exterior cell membranes and the myelin sheaths ("skin") surrounding nerve fibers. It is thus essential for the normal structure and functioning of all cells in the body.

Cholesterol is also used by the body for synthesis of bile salts (necessary for emulsifying dietary fats; an important step in the digestion and absorption of dietary fats and fat-soluble vitamins), vitamins (vitamin D3), and steroid hormones (eg, cortisol, testosterone, estrogen). It is not found in foods of plant origin (plant cell membranes do not contain cholesterol), so that plant oils (eg, corn, peanut, canola, olive, etc.) are naturally cholesterol-free.

The cholesterol content of muscle foods is relatively consistent. Equivalent weights of poultry meat, with or without skin, are similar in cholesterol content. For example, 100 grams (about 3½ ounces) of roasted chicken (light meat portion) with skin, or 100 grams without skin, contain about 85 milligrams of cholesterol. Also similar to lean red meat cuts, for example, 100 grams of roasted/broiled beef top round, pork loin (blade), or leg of lamb (shank) contain 85 to 90 milligrams of cholesterol. Even fried (pork) bacon is comparable in cholesterol content (85 milligrams per 100 grams).

The more substantial difference between poultry and red meats (and, in fact, most of the variability in nutrient content of muscle foods in general) is in fat content and composition. The total fat content of poultry meat varies considerably with muscle type, and is more than double for dark meat portions (leg, thigh) which contain predominantly "red type" muscle fibers than light meat portions (breast) which contain predominantly "white" fibers. This reflects a greater amount of fat distributed throughout the muscle (intramuscular fat) in red than white muscles.

This difference also contributes to an almost 20 percent greater calorie content, on an equivalent weight basis, for dark than light meat. The inclusion of skin increases the total fat and, therefore, calorie content (60 to 150 percent and 14 to 25 percent, respectively) of each portion.

Overall, for roasted poultry meat without skin, total fat content ranges from approximately 3 percent (turkey, light meat) to 10 percent (chicken, dark meat). Because meats lose a significant amount of fat in cooking, values based on raw meat overestimate fat consumption. In contrast, beef cuts range from approximately 5 percent (top round, good/select) to 21 percent (chuck blade, prime), or about double that of poultry meat.

Farmers Union Announces Disaster Relief

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Farmers Union President Robert Junk announced that the family farm organization has organized a "farmer-to-farmer" disaster relief effort to assist family farmers in hurricane-stricken areas of Florida and Louisiana.

"The devastation that Hurricane Andrew brought to rural areas in these states is incredible," Junk said. "Farmers have lost their livelihoods and their homes. And, as anyone stricken by drought last year can attest, struggling through mountains of government red tape to ultimately receive disaster assistance amounting to a few pennies on the dollar of loss just isn't the answer."

Junk praised existing efforts of the Red Cross and other disaster relief organizations, but noted that they have understandably concentrated on more populous areas.

"We want the farmers in Florida and Louisiana to understand that farmers elsewhere in the country care about them and want to help them through these tough times," he said.

The farm leader explained that the farmer-to-farmer relief effort would involve two parts. First, a special account has been created already in PFU's Family Farm Foundation to accept cash contributions which will be forwarded to affected farmers. Second, the group will have a special collection site at its 21st annual convention, November 12-14, where farmers and others can bring canned goods, building materials, and other items to be taken directly to affected farmers.

Anyone wishing to make a donation to the farmer-to-farmer relief effort should make checks payable to PFU's Family Farm Foundation Relief Fund and mail them to Pennsylvania Farmers Union, 1337 North Front Street, Harrisburg, PA 17102.

FORESTS CLEAN, STORE, REGULATE WATER

Terry L. Maddox
Huntingdon County
Extension Director

Forests are important to our water supply. They not only receive rain and snow in upland regions, but also store and clean the water as it infiltrates the forest soil.

Forest soils act much like a blotter by filtering microscopic organisms from the water. In fact, the closer natural water is to the forest, the cleaner it is, which explains why municipal reservoirs are located as close as possible to the forest, collecting water at its cleanest point.

The forest also regulates the flow of water. Thanks to trees and woody vegetation, the forest floor becomes an enormous sponge, typically absorbing up to 18 inches of precipitation before gradually releasing it into natural channels and watercourses.

In this way, forests slow the volume of rainwater discharged into streams and rivers immediately after a rainstorm or snowfall. That reduces the harmful "peak" discharge which causes erosion and sedimentation.

Not all watersheds are forested. Any higher elevation land that feeds water into creeks and streams is a watershed. But pasture or farmland watersheds don't clean, store, and regulate water as well as forest soils.

Picture the difference between watering your lawn and watering your sidewalk, and you get some idea of the advantages of forested watersheds. Your lawn slowly absorbs the water and holds it as needed; your sidewalk sheds the water in torrents. Much like your lawn, a forest will supply an even flow of water, even in a dry climate with relatively little rainfall. Without the forest, the water would flow all at once after the rain.

Forested watersheds can be as small as the valley enveloping a mountain stream or as large as the Mississippi Valley watershed, which covers much of the middle third of the United States. But whether a watershed is small or large, they all have one advantage: they can be managed to regulate water supply.

By removing small blocks of trees, for example, forest managers can reduce the amount of precipitation used by the trees themselves. This allows more water to pass directly into the forest floor and eventually into streams, rivers, and reservoirs.

Foresters can also build a forest that is relatively water efficient. By planting hardwood trees, which use less water than evergreens, foresters can assure that more water will leave the forest and flow to populated areas badly in need of it.

Foresters can also manage a watershed to influence the timing of water flows. For example, by harvesting trees on a south slope of a hill instead of a north slope, foresters can actually increase stream flow in the early spring and decrease flows in late summer. Sounds like hocus pocus? Well, it's really quite logical. Because the sun shines brightest on south-facing slopes, removing trees there exposes the snow to direct sunlight and allows it to melt faster than it otherwise would.

Forestry and watershed management have been intertwined disciplines since as far back as 1500 B.C., when the Chinese altered their forests to regulate stream flow onto irrigated fields.

TEMPERATURE AND FEED REQUIREMENTS

There continues to be plenty of grass available in pastures across most of Pennsylvania, and this will result in beef cows entering the winter in good to excellent condition.

The biggest problem encountered by most producers has been the quality of the second cutting hay that was made. Even though the cows are in good flesh now, that hay will be the source of some concern later in the winter.

The fall condition of a beef cow is related to the feeding program she should have for the winter. For example, cows with a condition score of 2-3 would necessarily have to gain 100 pounds or more before calving if they are going to milk well and rebreed.

With most cows having a score of 5-6 this year, that weight gain may not be necessary. However, there are two things that will drastically change the feeding program. First, the last trimester of pregnancy and early lactation will result in a two- to three-fold increase in protein requirements. The poor quality of some of the hay made in the last month will force some sort of supplemental feeding if these protein requirements are to be met.

Secondly, cold and/or wet conditions will increase the feed needs of the cow.

Late pregnancy and early lactation protein needs can be met in a variety of ways. A good quality legume hay is probably the easiest way to meet the need. Protein blocks and lick tanks are also used for additional protein, but you have to remember that many of these products contain large amounts of urea as the protein source.

If you are forced to feed some lower quality hay, there may not be enough energy in the diet to use the urea to produce protein and it is just excreted as ammonia. You end up, then, with a cow that is both energy and protein deficient.

Also, energy deficient cows will often overconsume the molasses carrier for the protein as a source of energy, and the cost of feeding can get out of hand.

Where there is some protection available from the weather, an effective protein supplement can be built from soybean meal and mixed with salt to control consumption.

Call me or your local extension office for a fact sheet, "Using Salt in Grain and Protein Supplements."

Winter temperature can also effect feed needs. The critical temperature — the temperature below which a cow will start to use additional feed energy to keep warm — will determine what the feed requirements are in cold weather. Unlike at calving and lactation, the protein requirement of a cow does not increase in cold weather.

The nutrient needed is energy, and the cheapest source of energy is plain shelled corn. For mature beef cows with a good hair coat, the critical temperature is about 0 degrees Fahrenheit (F). Therefore, most Pennsylvania winters would not appear to be severe enough to increase feed needs.

However, a cow standing in a 20 mph wind with an outside temperature of 30 degrees F has reached her critical temperature. Likewise, wetting the hair of a cow has the same effect as reducing the outside temperature by 40-50 degrees F.

The rule of thumb to remember for supplementing energy to cows in bad weather is that for each decrease of 1 degree F below the critical temperature, the energy requirement of the cow goes up 1 percent. That is, a cow in a 20 mph wind at 20 degrees F needs the equivalent of an additional 1 pound of corn to meet her needs.

The effects of temperature and weather will start a "chain reaction" of undesirable results for cows that may be eating some marginal hay this winter after they calve. Cold, wet weather will increase the energy needs of a cow, and no supplementation will result in her using body stores or protein feed to produce energy.

This lack of nutrients will result in lower feed production for the calf. A feed-deficient cow will always result in a deficient calf as well, so the calf will suffer from lack of production, reduced ability to fight disease, and reduced ability to use passive immunity from scour vaccines and others from the dam.

In addition, the month-old calf has a critical temperature of 32 degrees F, so more of its few body stores of energy will be used to keep warm. The result will be poor growing and sick calves and cows that are not milking and fail to get bred.

In summary, if you are stuck with some poor hay this winter, don't let the condition of the cow now fool you into believing the hay will be all right. There are several things that can change the nutritional needs of the cow, so be ready with a plan and resources of corn and protein to make up for the deficiencies.

Machinery Enthusiasts Can Join Club

WINAMAC, Ind. — International Harvester Collectors is a nonprofit association of enthusiasts interested in International Harvester equipment of all types.

It was organized on July 20, 1990, at Winamac. At that time, more than 200 people met to elect nine directors and establish the purpose of the club, and become members.

By the end of 1990, there were about 800 charter members. In the past two years the club has grown to almost 1,700 members from all over the U.S. and several foreign countries.

To accommodate this number of members, and to provide for more localized involvement for them, the club is sanctioning chapters in any area where the number of members permit. During the past year, chapters have been formed in Missouri, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Kansas. Iowa is now organizing a chapter.

Each year a national convention, known as the Red Power Roundup, is hosted by a different antique power show. Hundreds of collectors come to show off their favorite IH items to the thousands of guests attending these annual meets.

Conventions have been held at Edgerton, Wis. on Labor Day weekend, 1991, and Marion, Ohio in June of 1992. Future plans for the Red Power Roundup are Boonville, Mo. September 1992, and Hookstown, Pennsylvania September 1994.

The States of Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, and the Dakotas are eligible to host in 1995. The club is planning a winter convention in northern Illinois in late February or early March, 1993.

Annual appearances at the Farm Progress Show and the National Farm Machinery Show are also major events for the club.

Membership includes two 3 inch logo decals, membership card, and club newsletter. Annual dues are $10. For membership or information, contact I H Collectors, RR 2 Box 286, Winamac, IN 46996.

Quality Down The Line

Early Weaning May Increase Profits, Rebreeding

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Many cattlemen have always weaned at the same time each season. While this may be profitable for your operation, it may be beneficial to consider weaning calves earlier than the normal 240-270 days of age.

Recent studies are showing that when faced with limited feed supplies, low-quality pastures or special situations, early weaning may allow a practical way to efficiently use feed resources while still obtaining satisfactory calf gains.

Early weaning merits special consideration when you're trying to improve the rebreeding of first-calf heifers. The stresses of lactation, growth, and preparation for rebreeding are especially severe in first-calf heifers, and may result in a conception delay. Nursing delays the female's ability to recycle after calving and early weaning decreases the interval between calving and estrus.

Dr. John Hough, director of education and research for the American Polled Hereford Association, said that early weaning to improve fertility of first-calf heifers may be done when calves are 35 to 60 days old.

"Studies from Clemson University have shown that 81 percent of heifers whose calves were weaned at 56 days of age calved within the first 30 days of the following calving season. Only 46 percent of heifers subjected to normal weaning calved within the same period," he said.

Early weaning can also make the best use of marginal or lower-quality forage by dry cows. Calves can ber put into drylot or fed grain while on pasture to achieve efficient gains. Dry cows can then be placed on lower-quality pasture because their nutrient requirements are lower.

The most critical period for early-weaned calves is the first two weeks after weaning. Calves must overcome the stress of weaning and learn to eat feed very quickly. Hough said palatable feed, good management, and good facilities to reduce stress will decrease any riskiness associated with early weaning.

Don't forget vaccination," Hough said. "At weaning, all calves should be vaccinated for blackleg and malignant edema. Pasteurella vaccines may also be considered. And it's a good idea to vaccinate a couple weeks prior to weaning so that immunity will be established when the calves are weaned. Your local veterinarian can recommend a vaccination program suited to your area."

Calves should be put in a small pen with some type of shelter available. Smaller pens are preferred over larger lots because the larger areas encourage fence walking and make it more difficult to find feed and water.

"The final and most important step of weaning calves early is nutrition," Hough said. "A properly balanced ration will get younger calves up and running and discourage any potential problems."

Veterinarians or county extension offices can provide more information about early weaning, nutrition programs, and weaning practices.

The Glencoe SS7200 Soil Saver is a coulter chisel that cuts and incorporates crop residue in single pass primary tillage.

Chisel Incorporates Residue In Single Pass

EXCELSIOR, Minn. — A rugged yet economical new Primary Mulch Tillage Implement has been introduced by Farmhand, Inc.

The Glencoe SS7200 Soil Saver is a coulter chisel that cuts and incorporates crop residue in single pass primary tillage. In the process, soil is stirred and aerated to improve tilth and promote better root, water, and air movement. Compliance requirements are met and there's more potential for healthier crops and higher yields.

The SS7200 has a weighted main frame that delivers uniform shank penetration, operating strength, and long life. Two hydraulic cylinders control depth in a series-type lift system.

Three single-axle models of the SS7200 are available: 5-, 7-, and 9-shank models with working widths from 6 feet 3 inches to 11 feet 3 inches. Shank and shovel options allow selective residue incorporation in any crop, and any soil type. Manual depth control allows 1-inch increments in depth adjustment from 4 inches to 12 inches. Optional attachments can be added to incorporate more residue or to leave a more level soil surface.

Hoffman Offers Wheat Value Package

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Hoffman Seeds has introduced a wheat Value Pak®. The palletized package contains 54 units of a single Hoffman wheat variety, while offering farmers up to $60 in savings.

Farmers can select their Pak from among three varieties — Hoffman 28 Brand, Hoffman 45 Brand, and Hoffman 89 Brand.

Hoffman 28 is a soft red wheat providing maximum straw production. It topped 1990 University of Delaware trials for straw yields at 3.1 tons/acre. Hoffman 28 can be used in place of rye for growers wanting silage with a later maturity.

Hoffman 45 is a fully awned variety featuring high test weights. A medium maturity variety, it tolerates high nitrogen rates and is recommended for areas where poultry manure has caused lodging problems.

Hoffman 89 led the field in 1989 and 1990 trials conducted by the universities of Maryland and Delaware. Its test weights averaged nearly 3.5 pounds/bushel more than field averages. Hoffman 89 also offers a broad spectrum of disease tolerance, including leaf rust, soilborne mosaic, and septoria.

Don't Cut Silage Crop Early

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — With all the planning, labor, and money that's gone into your silage crop, don't get anxious and cut it too early.

"You planted corn for silage because of the high nutrient yield per acre, and this is another year when you want to get the very highest yield possible," said Bob Francis of Sollenberger Silos Corp.

Immature corn produces a lot of soggy, sour silage that's low in feed value. You may get a lot of weight with this green silage, but you will be limiting the total feed value available from your corn acreage.

According to Francis, forages stored above 65 percent moisture will weep, causing loss of nutrients and damage to the silo, the unloader, and feeding equipment. Feeds containing more than 70 percent moisture provide an excellent environment for harmful bacteria growth and production of undesirable acids, resulting in lowered palatability. As your silage approaches 80 percent moisture, the total weight stored in your silo nearly doubles. This causes extreme stress on the structure and may result in silo collapse. In other words, a silo that was designed to hold 500 tons of silage would be under extreme stress if you loaded it with 1,000 tons of wet, heavy feed.

Because of the cool weather in many parts of the East this year, the corn crop in most areas will be a few days to a few weeks late maturing. It will be very easy to cut your feed too early if you are accustomed to begin harvesting according to the calendar, said Francis. Check your crop closely this year to be sure it is indeed ready. As your corn matures, it increases in total dry weight and most of this increase is in the ear, the very heart of your silage.

The general recommended moisture content for forage being placed in a conventional top-unloading silo, said Francis, is in the range of 55 percent to 65 percent. Forages, especially hay, stored in a bottom-unloading silo should be 50 percent moisture or less. The moisture content for high-moisture grains should be in the range of 25 percent to 32 percent.

Please consult your state extension service or the "Silo Operator's Manual" from the International Silo Association.

Pump Is On-Demand System

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — From the makers of the world famous Rife ram comes a new generation of energyless watering systems, with the same quality and performance that has been associated with Rife rams since 1884.

The Rife pasture pump is a device that lets livestock pump their own water. This on-demand system can be used to draw water from a spring, pond, stream, or a shallow well to a maximum depth of 26 feet over a distance of 126 feet horizontally.

The pump is simply mounted on a timber platform held onto the ground by four stakes. These stacks are easily removed to facilitate easy relocation of the pump. This mobility comes in handy for those practicing rotational grazing.

The Slingpump is a self-supporting system for pumping water. The power to drive the pump is provided by the flow of the water. This water can then be used at homes, in irrigation, watering livestock, and in gardening.

The pump is completely mechanical and operates without electricity or fossil fuels. All parts are non-corrosive and designed to withstand a high degree of stress.

No previous experience or special tools are required to install and operate the system.

Gainer, who recently held the position of parts manager, worked in several positions for 15 years at Messick.

Messick, in business for 39 years, markets a wide range of farm equipment from Ford New Holland, Case IH, Kubota, and other manufacturers. They are located at the Rheems exit of Rt. 283, and can be reached at (717) 367-1319.

Ecogen Develops IPM Programs

LANGHORNE (Bucks Co.) — Integrated pest management (IPM) becomes an increasingly important concept, because each year insects become increasingly difficult to control with standard chemical regimens.

It is estimated that as many as 500 species of insects have shown resistance to currently used insecticides. As the resistance increases, the risk of control failure also increases. It can make the convenience of single chemical "wipe 'em out" management a very expensive proposition.

"Nothing will open your eyes faster than watching a Long Island, N.Y. potato grower trying to control the onslaught of resistant Colorado potato beetles with a propane burner because standard chemical controls no longer work," said Don Jackson, director of marketing/sales for Ecogen Inc.

Resistance among lepidopteran and coleopteran insect species has become a serious problem for many growers throughout the nation.

Mark Otto of Agribusiness Consultants, Lansing, Mich., said, "If you wait to employ IPM programs because resistance has become a problem . . . you've waited too long. Many growers in our area no longer practice 'resistance management.' Now we just try to manage what is resistant."

Jackson said, "Ecogen is constantly searching for alternatives to standard chemical management practices. Through Ecogen bioengineering research, we have developed superior strains of Bt (Bacillus thuringiensis). Condor® Cutlass® and Foil® bioinsecticides are designed to play an integral part in IPM programs when alternative insecticides can achieve the desired control of pests and break the buildup of resistance."

In addition, Ecogen has recently invested millions of dollars to acquire assets and pest control technologies that will play vital roles in tomorrow's IPM programs.

"We will soon be able to provide a wide range of alternatives. For example, we will soon market beneficial nematodes which are purely insecticidal, hyperparasitic fungi which kill other fungi such as powdery mildew, and pheromone technology which uses natural odors to disrupt mating processes," said Jackson.

"It is important to note that Ecogen does not promote the use of biologicals at the exclusion of other pesticides. To recommend this would be to fall into the same trap that has plagued the industry for years. Instead we recommend the use of biologicals as a part of IPM programs, in partnership with standard chemicals," he said.

FARM MANAGEMENT

GETTING THE MOST FROM YOUR BUSINESS PLAN

Russ Powell
Extension Agent
Business Management

For anyone considering a new business venture or expanding an existing business, a business plan is a must in today's financial environment.

However, as important as the document itself, it is equally important to get the most you can out of your business plan by knowing your lender, what is important to them, and how to best present the plan.

Get to Know Your Lender

Obtaining a loan for a credible business venture can be a relatively simple process. However, you must understand how the lender or investor views the situation.

Often the individual that you are talking with will not be the only person involved in making the final decision about whether you get a loan. He or she may be required to submit your proposal to a credit department or loan committee for approval.

You must explain everything carefully and thoroughly because the loan officer may not know your business well enough to "sell" it to the committee making the decisions. Although some financial institutions have specialities, an individual lender cannot be an expert on everything.

It is up to you to educate the lender about your industry and business.

Create Confidence

Get to know local banks and the type of businesses they like to finance and then establish a credit history with the most suitable one. The better they know you, the better your chances are of getting a loan.

However, don't be afraid to shop around for the best terms. Remember, the bank maintains a credit file on you that tells your whole story. Ask your banker to explain what goes into a credit file. Records are kept of overdrafts and past due notes. Keep your name off of these lists.

You may also want to ask to see your industry's standards that are found in the Robert Morris studies that are published annually. This publication is the basis of your lender's analysis of the figures on your financial statements.

Bankers are interested in the "bottom line." Show how much money you have invested in your business and how much of a reserve you have within accounts at that bank. In effect, you want to prove that you are furnishing the money to the bank for them to lend.

Be prepared to personally guarantee your loan by pledging personal assets as collateral. If you are not willing to take the risk, why should the banker?

Remember that bankers think in terms of "The Five C's of Credit":

- Character — You
- Capital — Your net worth
- Capacity — Earnings
- Conditions — What is going on?
- Collateral — What are you pledging?

Remember that your banker is human. Emotion must accompany the logic to convince the lender. As Aristotle said, "No appeal to logic is successful without appeal to emotion."

Presenting the Business Plan

Timing is important. Call to make an appointment and then send your written material for the banker to become familiar with. Prepare thoroughly for the presentation.

There are five questions that you should be able to answer within the first two minutes of the meeting. How much do you want? How long do you want it for? What are you going to do with the money? How are you going to repay the loan? Alternate source of repayment if plan "A" goes wrong?

Be honest with the banker, even if it is bad news. Bankers are more influenced by what they don't like than by what they do like.

Explain how you plan to address your weaknesses or potential problems. Sooner or later, the banker will find out anyway and they will be much more impressed with a candid assessment of strengths and weaknesses than deception.

Arrive for the appointment on time, dress appropriately, and make a professional presentation. Remember, you are selling yourself and your business.

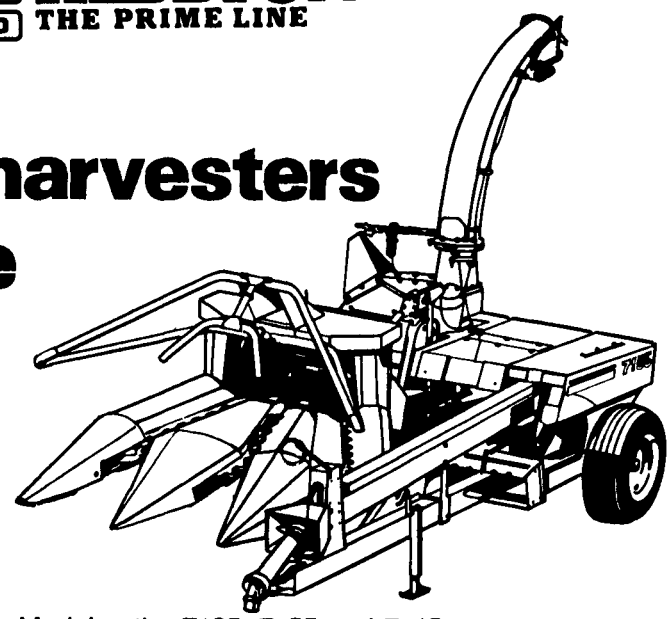
Hesston harvesters give more forage on less fuel.



Three Hesston Models...the 7165, 7155 and 7145... offer increased harvesting capacity with the revolutionary 8-Knife TurboVane Cutting Cylinder. This exclusive Hesston design features eight C-2 knives that produce high capacity "scissor-action" cutting that eliminates bunching and carry-over...and gives more output on less fuel!

The C-2 knives have two cutting edges that can be reversed for longer service life. And the Auto-Sharp Knife Grinder, standard on the 7155 and 7165, sharpens quickly and easily...anytime and anywhere! It is a self-indexing grinder that sharpens knives with the cylinder running in normal cutting direction.

Two Counties Dominate 4-H Events At Maryland Fair

Kelly Kluka, 10, of Marriottsville poses with the pinkish-lavender African violet that earned her a championship ribbon at the Maryland State Fair in Timonium. Judges appreciated the perfection of the flowers, the good foliage, the shape of the plant, and the clean container. Kluka was one of 10 Baltimore County 4-H'ers to win champion or reserve champion honors in the indoor events competition.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — 4-H members from Baltimore and Carroll counties dominated the indoor events at the Maryland State Fair in Timonium, winning champion and reserve champion ribbons in a total of 20 categories.

Seven 4-H'ers from Carroll County took top honors in nine individual events, while the Carrollton 4-H Club received the highest award for their booth exhibit promoting 4-H, which judges praised for its large componenet figures and eye-catching colors.

Jaime Baile, 13, of Union Bridge led the way with championship entries in junior art and crafts categories. Her detailed black-and-white pencil portrait and paper mache vegetables arranged in a basket captivated the judges.

Kieth Dutterer, 11, Westminster, also earned recognition for his entries in two categories. He was named champion in the grain category for his barley and reserve champion in the intermediate food preparation category for his pink-and-white angel food cake.

Laura Langlotz, 15, of Monkton displays the wool fleece that earned her a championship ribbon at the Maryland State Fair in Timonium. Langlotz's entry was selected for its strength, softness, elasticity, uniformity of fibers, and clean apperance.

Other Carroll County champions were: Cheryl Owings, 12, of Union Bridge in the intermediate food preparation category for her white rolls; Megan Hankins, 14, of Hampstead in the senior crafts

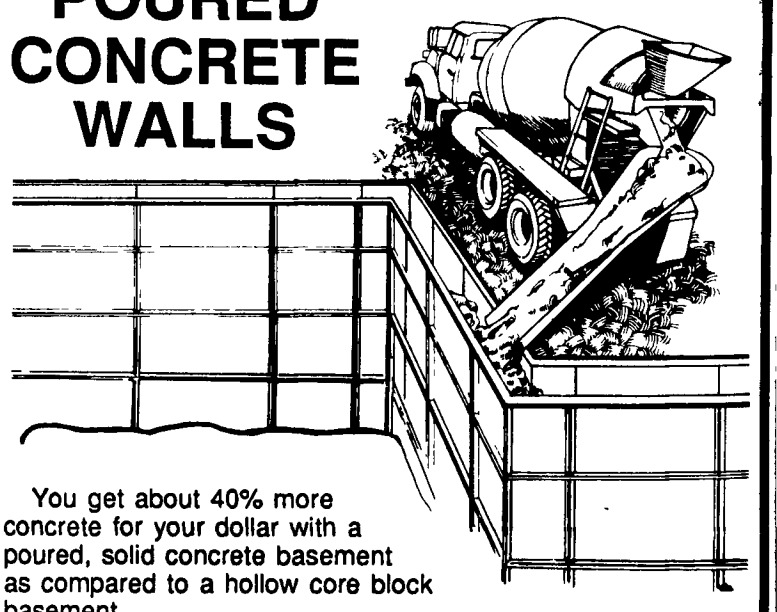
START WITH THE BEST!
POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement.

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs. more per cubic foot! Far denser. What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic ... there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration.

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced.

Solid Concrete For:

- Manure Pit Walls
- Hog House Walls
- Barnyard Walls
- Chicken House Walls
- Retaining Walls
- House Foundation Walls

Attends Soybean Program

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Jim Musser of Mount Joy participated in the American Soybean Association's Leadership Development Program here, sponsored by Ciba-Geigy.

Musser and 19 other soybean growers from across the country attended in order to learn leadership skills that will help them promote their industry.

"Leaders look forward to the future. They hold in their minds visions and ideals of what can be," said Brent Crook, manager/sales training for Ciba-Geigy. "They also enlist the support of others to make the vision a reality." Crook led a seminar on leadership style.

The three-day program also featured in-depth workshops on parliamentary procedure, identifying communications styles, and honing media skills.

"The success of any organization depends on capable leadership," said Phil Koch, Ciba-Geigy's manager/agricultural associations. "We are especially pleased to sponsor this program because it fits well with our philosophy of supporting American farmers and their industry."

Video Emphasizes Conservation

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A new 29-minute television program features successful farmers and ranchers from around the country who are showing the economic, cultural, and environmental benefits of good land and water resource conservation.

It also includes heavy emphasis on protecting the nation's water resources from potential agricultural pollutants.

The video was released by William Richards, chief of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service (SCS), and William Reilly, administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). Produced with the nonprofit organization Winrock International, the video is for general interest, environmental, and agricultural audiences.

Richards noted that the two agencies have worked together for some time. SCS has assigned a water quality specialist to each EPA region. Both SCS and EPA see the video as one of many common efforts toward conserving the nation's natural resources.

Raymond Burr narrates the video. Burr has a 40-acre farm in California, where he grows grapes and orchids, and raises sheep. As a farmer, he said he is pleased to have had a part in making a video that portrays U.S. farmers' concern for wildlife, the environment, and for sustaining America's agricultural base for future generations.

The video is being distributed by the National Association of Conservation Districts which represents local soil conservation districts. Copies are available from the association's Service Center, P.O. Box 855, League City, Texas 77574-0855, (800) 825-5547.

PREVENT PIGLET CRUSHING

BSM Model 90 Farrowing Crate

GALVANIZED!

Constructed from heavy gauge materials this crate is designed to reduce crushing, with sow comfort in mind. The bowed bottom bars makes for a comfortable 33" crate width when the sow lays down, yet the adjustable anti-crush bars eliminates the sow from carelessly dropping in the piglets.

This movement restriction does not hamper the sow as she lays down, or wants to stand up, as the bars slide up and out of her way.

Parasite Control Important In Fall, Winter

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Controlling parasites is a challenge for any cattleman. Keeping pests under control is cost-effective any time of the year, but fall and early winter weather offers superior opportunities to take steps that reduce possibilities of herd contamination.

Dr. John Hough, education and research director for the American Polled Hereford Association, said the fall season is a particularly susceptible period for infestation, especially in warmer climates. With the milder winter and summer experienced this year, infections are more likely as well.

All cattle, particularly young ones, are affected by a number of internal parasites. These include roundworms, liver flukes, tapeworms, and single-celled parasites. All kinds of internal parasites can be economically significant and lower profit potential. Recognizing internal parasites, life cycles, and methods of infection can be of great benefit to your parasite control program.

Roundworms are very common and several species found in cattle of all ages across the country. The largest infections are usually found in weaning and yearling cattle. Depending upon the species, the worms may penetrate and migrate in tissue, suck blood, or otherwise cause small hemorrhages, cause erosion of surface layers of the gut lining, or cause formation of nodules. A major effect of roundworm infection is a severe loss of appetite resulting in failure to grow or even weight loss.

Noticing these and other signs associated with roundworm infection should be an indication to start controlling the problem. Complete eradication of roundworms is practically impossible. However, control can be obtained and maintained.

"Grazing management is one of the first areas to consider for parasite control," said Hough. "Pastures considered to have the lowest levels of parasite infection should be reserved for younger, more susceptible stock. Reduced pasture contamination can result from the pasture being vacated for several weeks in summer for hay production, being grazed exclusively by older dry cows for several weeks, harvested cropland or rested pasture planted in annual forages, and frequent, extensive treatment with dewormers."

Hough also said that careful use of broad spectrum dewormers have significant benefits to help reduce parasite losses in cattle, whether roundworms or other internal parasites. The primary purpose of dewormers is to reduce levels of pasture contamination, not to cure sick animals.

"Be certain to apply dewormers at recommended rates and always follow label directions," Hough said. "More is not always better."

Hough emphasizes that you cannot eliminate all parasites, but control can often be cost-effective and increase the potential profits from your herd.

The local extension office or local veterinarian can provide additional information about parasite control.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds
BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.
MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.
ON-FARM MIXING
A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that
- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

IXL
Anti-friction Metal Conditioner

Efficiency is our Newest Resource

Science brings a new dimension to Anti-Friction
A metal conditioner product ahead of its time, IXL will give your equipment priceless protection. IXL gives protection far superior to just oil or lubricants. IXL is specifically designed to be used in: (NEW) and (USED) gasoline & diesel engines, compressors, automatic & manual transmissions, hydraulics, gear boxes, bearings of all types, turbos, pumps, and much more. IXL is a metal conditioner which treats all ferrous metals 3 to 5 microns deep, thereby making the metal surfaces harder, denser and smoother. These results are minimum metal wear, giving maximum engine and machine life. IXL reduces heat, friction, and wear, up to 75% without changing tolerances, reducing friction will release energy previously expended to overcome ordinary mechanical resistance. This energy is now available as a positive force, working to increase power, performance and fuel savings. IXL, also helps maintain and recondition seals and gaskets, by keeping these items pliable, firm, and flexible. It will help prevent leaks, IXL is not a lubricant fortifier, such as PTFE, Moly, or graphite. IXL is biodegradable, NON-TOXIC and environmentally safe. IXL is one of the highest quality products on the market today.

MASTER MIX

SILO-BOOSTER

REDUCING THE LEVEL OF NITRATE IN HEAT STRESSED CORN SILAGE

Why should you use Master Mix SILO-BOOSTER instead of another product? SILO-BOOSTER has been proven in 23 years of on-farm use, as well as in continuous university research. With each new discovery in silage science, we have improved the original formula. Today's SILO-BOOSTER gives the most efficient silage innoculant yet developed.

Laboratory analysis of both treated and untreated silages confirms the increased production of lactic acid by the bacterial cultures in SILO-BOOSTER.

	SILO-BOOSTER TREATED	CONTROL
Lactic acid % (average of 11 measurements from day 1 to day 30)	2.35%	1.83%
pH (average of 11 measurements from day 1 to day 30)	3.98%	3.96%

While both silages showed very similar changes in total pH change; the SILO-BOOSTER treated silage contained more lactic acid. The homofermentive production of lactic acid by SILO-BOOSTER cultures reduces the potential for dry matter losses and the generation of excessive heat of fermentation.

COMPARISON OF SILO-BOOSTER TREATED AND CONTROL SILAGES

Fed To High Producing Dairy Cows
Conducted At The University of Wisconsin

	SILO-BOOSTER SILAGE	CONTROL
Milk (Lb./day)	87.3	86.2	NS
Fat %	3.84	3.88	NS
Forage DM Intake (Lb./day)	26.97	29.99	**
Conc. DM Intake (Lb./day)	27.45	26.78	NS
Total DM Intake (Lb. day)	54.31	56.77	*
DM/Lb. Milk.	0.65	0.69	**

N.S. - non significant, *<5%, <1%
Statistics conducted on weekly totals.

SILO-BOOSTER treated silage was able to generate income per ton of forage feed. With milk valued at $ .125 per pound; butterfat at $ .17 per point; forage at $ .045 per pound of dry matter, and the concentrate portions at $ .08 per pound; SILO-BOOSTER silage returned $4.90 for each $1.00 invested in inoculant.

APPLICATION: 1 Lb. of SILO-BOOSTER per ton of Forage.
2 Lbs. of SILO-BOOSTER per ton of High Moisture Ear Corn.

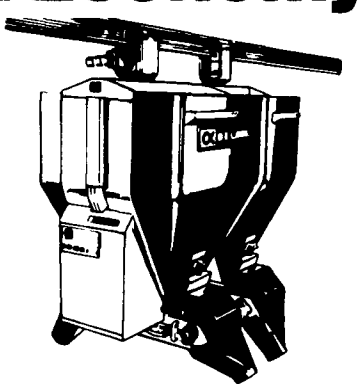
High Performance In An Economy Car



If you operate a stanchion or tie-stall barn, the De Laval Feed Car is the most cost-effective way to improve your herd's efficiency and your farm's performance.

The Feed Car helps you feed cows "less and often." With this method, each cow eats less, yet converts more of what she does eat into milk and butterfat. And because it's a healthier way to feed, you'll see fewer rumen upsets and foot problems.

Best of all, the Feed Car reduces your labor. It works automatically to improve your profitability. And it's so efficient, the system typically pays for itself in 18 months or less!

Attend The Solanco Fair

Solanco

Homemade chicken corn soup may be the most celebrated reason to visit the Southern Lancaster County Community Fair. But funnel cakes and beef barbecues can hold their own at Quarryville's smorgasbord of fair food.

No midway clutters the fairgrounds, only dozens of food stands assaulting taste buds from miles away.

Even the fair committee gets in on the act, serving lunches and dinners in the Hoffman Community Building. Wednesday's special will be chicken pot pie; Thursday's lunch will be beef stew, followed by a complete ham dinner on Friday. Hot roast beef sandwiches will also be served.

Visitors making it past all the food will find an impressive array of farm equipment displayed, and some of the county's top dairy cattle.

Four-year-old Tammy Peters from Drunmore likes to watch the cows and get stuff to eat (especially funnel cakes, she said) at last year's Solanco Fair.

The market livestock sale will close the fair Friday night.

Wednesday, Sept. 16: 10 a.m., dairy cattle show; 2 p.m., sheep show; 6:30 p.m., parade; 8:30, tug of war, lightweight and heavyweight division.

Thursday, Sept. 17: 10 a.m., dairy cattle show; 3 p.m., swine show; 7 p.m. beef show and baby parade; 8 p.m. family fun games.

Friday, Sept. 18: 10 a.m., adult and junior tractor driving contest; 5 p.m., celebrity invitational milking contest; 6 p.m., market livestock sale.

WHERE'S THE FAT? NOT HERE!

Dr. Edward Mills
Assistant Professor
Penn State
Department of Dairy
And Animal Science

Each year food manufacturers offer Americans thousands of new or modified food products. Many of these products are intended to satisfy a surging demand for lower calory, lower fat, and more healthful foods. Meat companies large and small are busily working to offer their own versions of low-fat, healthy meat products.

In each meat product category, the opportunities for making a low-fat item vary. For example, fresh, whole-muscle meat items such as steaks, chops, and roasts offer only a few options for further fat reductions. The only practical option for the meat retailer to reduce fat in such products is to trim away surface or seam fat.

Immense amounts of fat are currently trimmed from meat animal carcasses to provide lower-fat products to consumers. The best alternative to trimming away fat is to avoid putting it on initially.

Production of leaner animals combined with trimming of excess fat results in a wide variety of fresh meat products which are low in fat.

Unlike fresh, whole-muscle items, manufactured meat products such as ground beef, luncheon meat, and frankfurters are formulated to contain whatever fat content is desired. The processor decides what the fat content should be, and then combines appropriate ingredients to achieve that target amount. Lowering fat in these products is fundamentally very simple - you just don't put it in. In many instances, meat processors are removing more than 75 perecent of the fat from these products. However, the results of such a decision can be catastrophic.

Research at Penn State and elsewhere has shown that removal of a large portion of the fat without replacement results in products which are drier, more rubbery, and less flavorful than those to which consumers have become accustomed.

Various strategies may be employed to deal with these defects in low-fat products. The common strategy is to substitute water for part of the removed fat. This can make the product juicier and less rubbery, but doesn't contribute any of the flavor or mouthfulness sensation associated with fat. Many recent innovations in fat replacement for meat products represent efforts to make added water perform more like fat in those products.

A brief description of several of the materials which are being used or studied follows:

• Carrageenan, a polysaccharide purified from sea weed, has been used successfully in a number of low-fat meat products, especially ground beef patties. It improves the ability of such products to retain added water and release that water during chewing to give the desired juiciness. The carrageenan used in ground beef does not change the flavor. Thus, such products often contain added flavorings to improve the meat flavor profile.

• Oat bran or a mixture of oat bran and oat fiber may also be used to improve water retention and juiciness in low-fat ground beef. Oat bran also contributes a desirable mouth feel to the juices in the low-fat meat. In addition to its functional benefits, oat bran is often perceived to be healthful and thus is a consumer-friendly addition to the ingredient statement on the package.

• Modified food starch is a low-cost alternative to carrageenan and oat bran in low-fat meat products. Although it is not as effective as carrageenan, it aids in moisture retention. Modified food starch has been used successfully in low-fat pork sausage. Food starch has the added benefit of being a familiar ingredient with good consumer acceptance.

Much of the previous work in producing acceptable low-fat meat products has dealt with ground meat, but the focus in Penn State's Meats Laboratory is currently low-fat frankfurters.

Ingredients which work well in ground beef don't necessarily perform well in frankfurters. The addition of carrageenan or modified food starch results in some improvement in palatability of low-fat frankfurters, but they still lack the distinctive snap and full flavor of higher-fat products.

In recent studies, attempts have been made to find ingredients which more closely mimic fat in frankfurters. One candidate may be microcrystalline cellulose. This material consists of microscopic beads of cellulose. The beads can be coated with a thin layer of fat so that they function as fat droplets in the frankfurter. The technology seems very promising.

Initial consumer test results have indicated some improvement in palatability, but more work is needed before you will see low-fat frankfurters with microcrystalline cellulose in your local grocery store.

Farmland Trust Appeal Starts

YORK (York Co.) — The York County Farmland Trust's 1992 annual appeal campaign began on September 1, 1992, with a goal of $100,000, announced co-chairs Joyce King and Arthur Glatfelter. The $100,000 goal will provide funds essential to continue the farmland preservation work and operation of the Farmland Trust.

Preserving our farmland is important to all York Countians, said Stan Brown, president of the Farmland Trust. The trust permanently protected over 450 acres of York County farmland so far in 1992, and with continued support of our directors and the community, we hope to substantially increase the number of protected acres over the next 12 months, Brown commented.

The strength and success of the Farmland Trust can only be measured by the support and membership of county citizens and organizations. To receive your contribution form and membership information, please call the Farmland Trust office at 757-7012.

York County's future depends on the continued strength of its number one industry, agriculture. The Farmland Trust's role in preserving farmland is vital to the health and vitality of York County, as well as to the environment.

The York County Farmland Trust has grown in membership from a fledgling group of six concerned residents in 1990, to 400 members in August 1992. The Farmland Trust is the only private, non-profit land preservation organization in York County.

THE MEGASEAL™ COUPLING FROM GATES

OLD DESIGN:

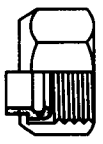
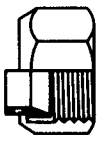
BETTER BY A NOSE

MegaSeal Coupling



The nose, or "beak," creates a concentric line seal on the male JIC.

JIC Coupling

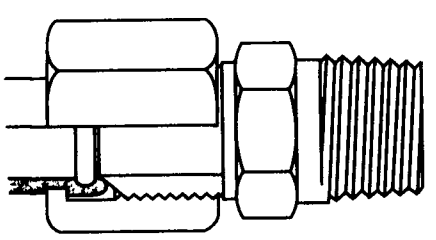


JIC flared seat can't duplicate the sealing forces of "the beak."

MegaSeal Couplings are designed with a rounded nose, or "beak," instead of the conventional flared seat of the female JIC swivel. The beak makes all the difference: when tightened or pressurized, the beak flexes, making an ever tighter seal on the male cone. Rigorous testing proves that, for stopping leaks, MegaSeal Couplings are every bit the equal of FFOR, less expensive than FFOR, and are now the standard by which the industry will measure performance in the years to come.

Comparisons with JIC
In comparing MegaSeal Couplings to JIC, the contrast is more remarkable, as the chart below shows. In order to achieve the same sealing pressures as the MegaSeal design, standard JIC fittings must be over-tightened. Overtightening often cracks the nuts or seats, leaks develop, and the assembly must be replaced.

WEEP NO MORE



MegaSeal Couplings mate with standard male JIC fittings.

Control Winter Wheat Diseases

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Growers can use simple strategies this fall to help ensure healthy stands of winter wheat, said a Penn State agronomy specialist.

"The most effective and economical method of controlling diseases is to plant resistant varieties," said Dr. Elwood Hatley, professor of agronomy in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

The "Penn State Agronomy Guide," available through Penn State Cooperative Extension offices, list disease- and pest-resistant wheat varieties for each area in the state. The guide rates resistance to leaf rust, powdery mildew, and Hessian fly. It also provides information about planting times, height, winter hardiness, straw strength, yield, and bushel weight.

"Planting during the recommended times also helps prevent disease," siad Hatley. "Growers sometimes are tempted to seed earlier in the fall rather than wait and risk unfavorable conditions. But if you plant too early, diseases have a chance to get started in the warmer weather. Cold weather can kill rust, but mildew will survive and return full-force in the spring, seriously affecting wheat."

It's just as important not to delay seeding. "If at all possible, plant during the recommended dates even if conditions aren't the most favorable," said Hatley. "If you seed too late, wheat doesn't have enough time to get established before winter sets in. If you must plant later, increase the seeding rate by 30 percent."

The "Penn State Agronomy Guide" contains advice on planting, fertilizing, harvesting, and controlling diseases and pests in Pennsylvania crops. The guide is available for $6 from county extension offices or from the Publication Distribution Center, 112 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802, (814)865-6713.

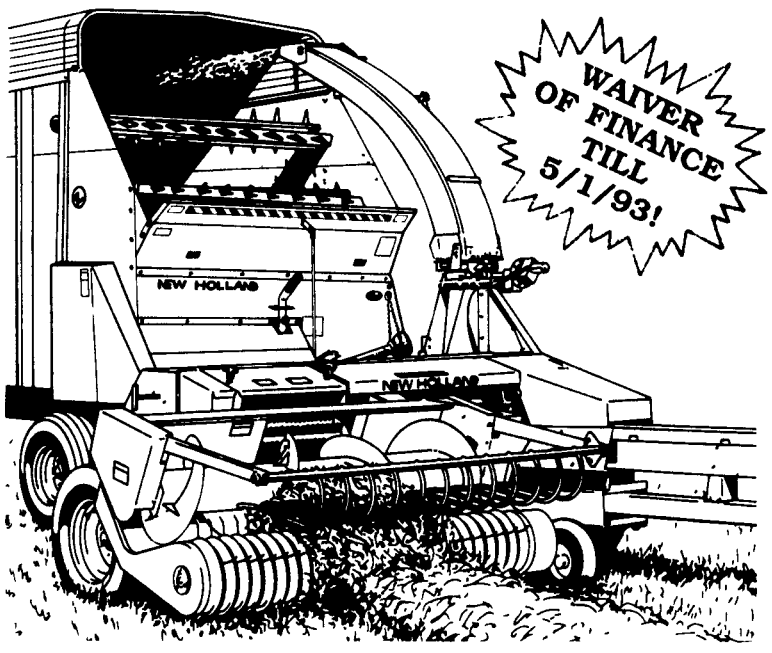
We can help you prevent bottleneck

There's no need to slow down silo filling by using an inefficient blower. The New Holland Model 28 forage blower will put a halt to that. It's built to reduce plugging and save time. The Whirl-A-Feed® table breaks up heavy clumps and spins the crop into the blower at high speed. This means less drag on the fan and more efficient use of your tractor's horsepower.

Stop in soon and let us show you how the Model 28 can save silo-blowing time for you.



Total performance for big crop harvesting

You get total performance when you harvest your crops with a Model 900 forage harvester. Total performance begins at the cutterhead. The 12 knives of the 21-inch cutterhead give you uniformly cut, high-quality forage. Other features on the "900" include:

- Metalert II® electronic metal detector (optional)—protects cutterhead and your valuable animals.
- Electromagnetic clutches—give instant response in controlling feedroll and attachment drives.
- Easy-adjust shearbar—makes adjustment fast and precise.

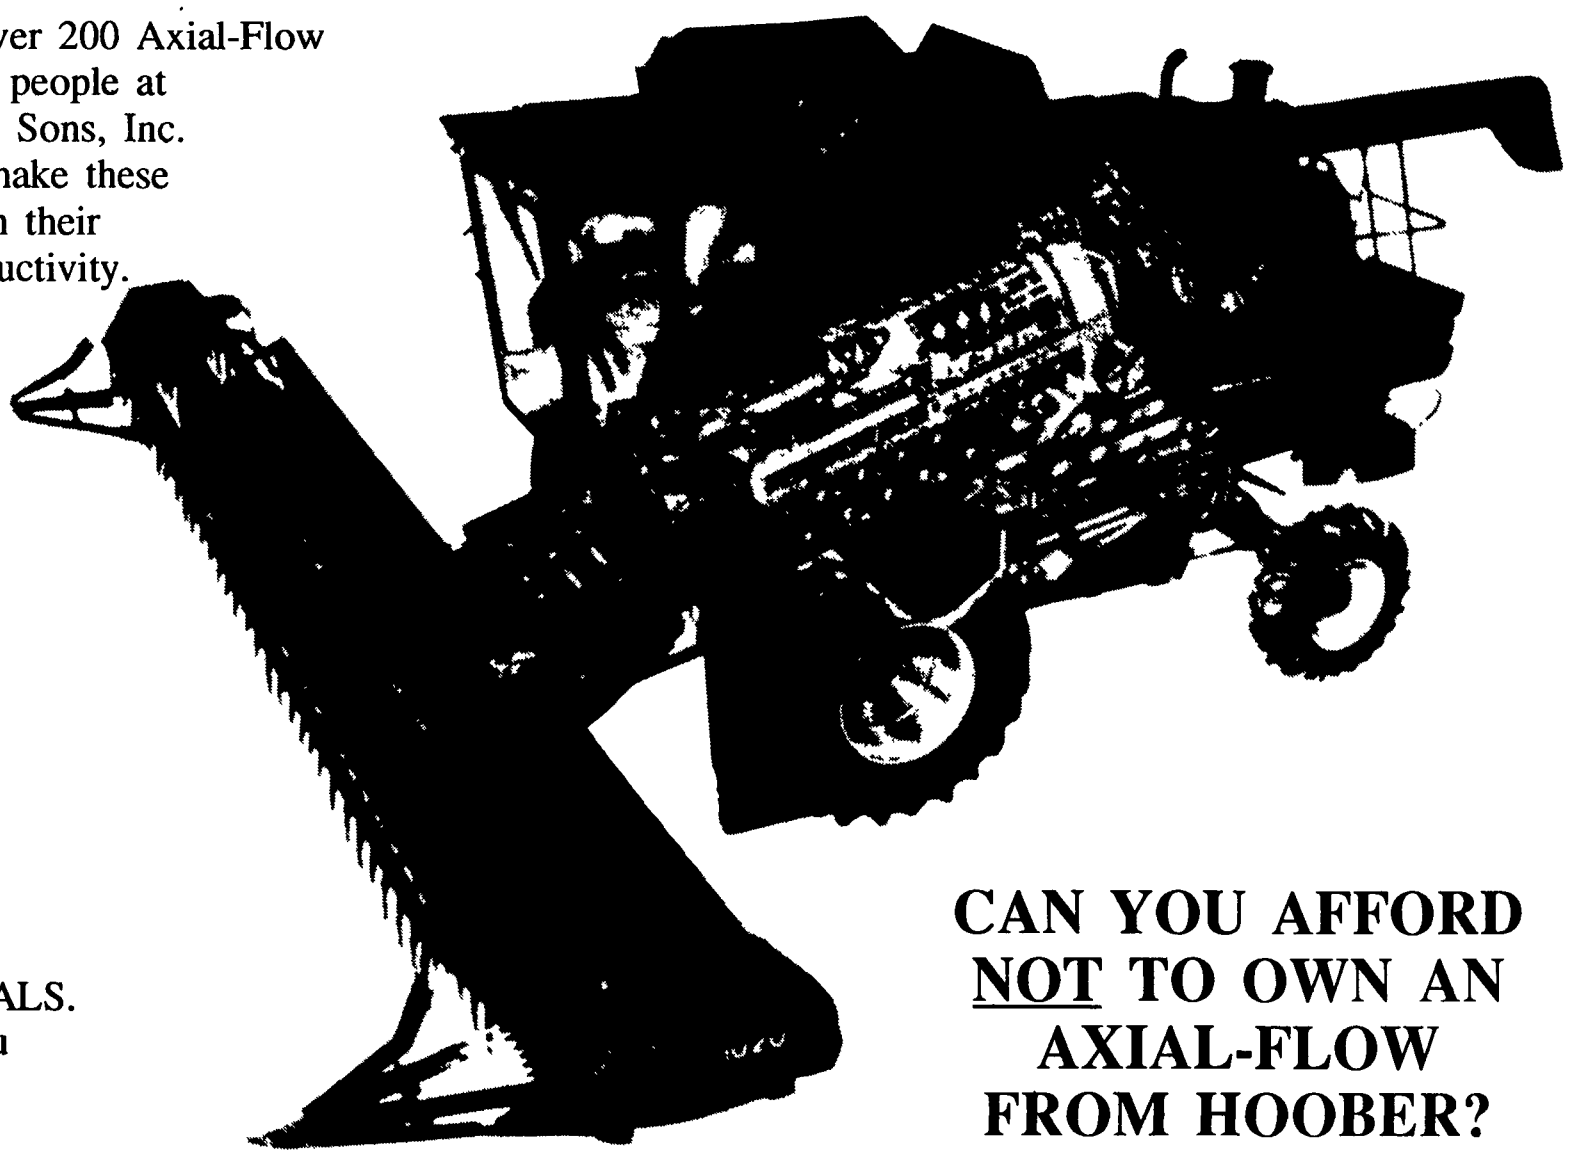
HOOBER PEOPLE MAKE AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES PRODUCE FOR YOU!

By servicing over 200 Axial-Flow Combines, The people at C.B. Hoober & Sons, Inc. know how to make these Combines reach their maximum productivity.



Talk to an owner of a combine serviced by HOOBER'S COMBINE PROFESSIONALS. They'll tell you how they produce.

CAN YOU AFFORD NOT TO OWN AN AXIAL-FLOW FROM HOOBER?

The Reason Axial-Flow Combines Are More Productive - THE ROTOR!

The Single Rotor design is SIMPLE!

Only a single rotor to thresh and separate. Eliminates the straw-walker assemblies common to conventional combines. Less moving parts means less maintenance, less downtime.

The Single Rotor Design is HIGHER QUALITY GRAIN

Multiple threshing action of axial-flow reduces kernal damage and holds elevator dockage to a minimum.

The Single Rotor Design Is MORE PRODUCTIVITY!

When your crops are ripe and ready to harvest, Axial-Flow allows you to move faster than with a conventional combine. The rotor's large throat means no bottle-necks up front. You'll be able to harvest at top speed for maximum productivity, even on side-hills.

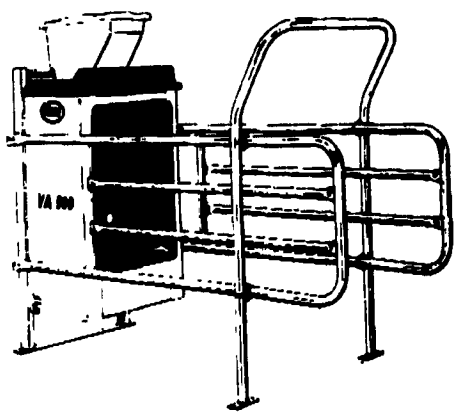
With this concentrate feeding system LESS MEANS MORE

Dairymen report a 7-8% increase in milk yield with 5% less concentrate input with the new VA 500.

Each cow's ration is fed automatically according to her individual lactation curve. Feeding for production means high producing cows get more. Every cow pays her way. The whole herd can be housed together and you don't need complicated computer support systems for operation.



Make your concentrate work harder.

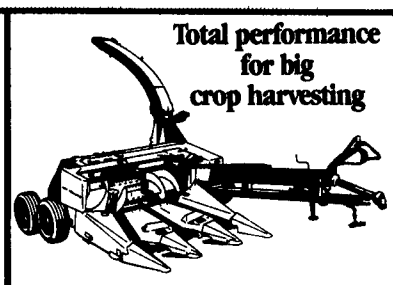
Seeing is believing

Every minute you can save at the blower means more loads per day and more overall productivity. Les us demonstrate the New Holland Model 40 forage blower and we believe you'll agree you can increase your silage productivity.
The Model 40, with 20 percent greater tip speed than previous models, center fills silos over 80 feet high. The Whirl-A-Feed® table spins the crop into the blower housing at high speed, making more efficient use of your tractor's horsepower.
See us soon for a demonstration of the Model 40.

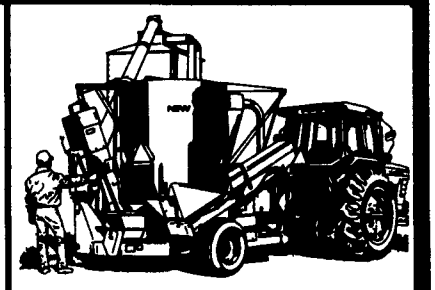
Total performance for big crop harvesting



You get total performance when you harvest your crops with a Model 900 forage harvester. Total performance begins at the cutterhead. The 12 knives of the 21-inch cutterhead give you uniformly cut, high-quality forage. Other features on the "900" include:

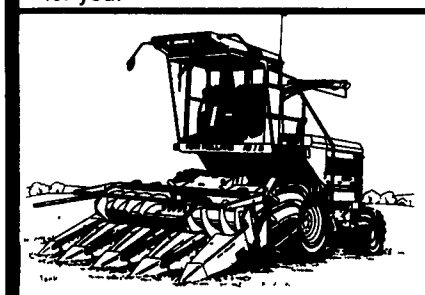
- Optional Metalert® II electronic metal detector—protects cutterhead and your valuable animals.
- Electromagnetic clutches—give instant response in controlling feedroll and attachment drives.
- Easy-adjust shearbar—makes adjustment fast and precise

Stop in soon and see the Model 900.



First in durability

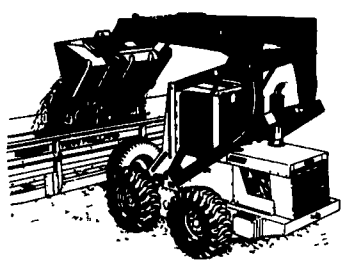
Surveys show owners rate New Holland grinder-mixers as the most durable That's because Ford New Holland builds them right and backs them with quality parts and service. The Model 358 has a 125-bushel tank that's specially designed to eliminate bridging An optional electronic scale assures accurate control of rations. Stop in and see the durable Model 358 grinder-mixer.



Harvest your crop with the best in self-propelled harvesting

If you custom harvest as well as chop your own forage, self-propelled harvester like the Model 1915 can help you harvest more crop at peak quality. The fuel-efficient 270-horsepower diesel engine and the 24-inch, 12-knife cutterhead give you high-capacity day-in and day-out harvesting. And the exclusive automatic knife sharpener and automatic shearbar adjuster, called Accucut™, combine to give you precision-sharpened knives and a reset shearbar, all from the comfort of the cab.

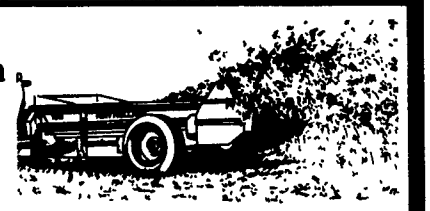
Stop in today and let us show you the other features of the "1915". Or better yet, let's set up a time to demonstrate this harvester in your own field.



Load... unload faster and easier

When you're working the big loads you need the Super Boom advantage — extra reach.
With more forward dump reach you can center load your largest spreader from one side so you get an even load. The result: faster loading, fuller loads and easier unloading.
With level bucket lift you load more and lift higher... with less spillback. And, with a longer wheelbase there's more stability and safety. So, why get stuck with anything else?
Find out just how good a skid-steer loader can be.

We have a spreader for any farm



Ford New Holland offers six quality spreaders to match any farming operation. All New Holland spreaders clean out fast to make quick work of dirty jobs.

VOLUMAXX

FOUR MAJOR INNOVATIONS

Make it the best in the world!

HI-LIFT Legs

Let you raise Volumaxx™ 15" higher than previous models, bringing it completely above the silo wall, so you can use a side distributor if you wish.

High Performance Roughage Auger

New 16° forward-pitched flighting design keeps material moving toward the center of the auger tube and away from the auger's digging action. Massive 10" auger gives you more efficiency and capacity.

Stainless Steel in Impeller/Blower Areas

New reversible rigid or swinging paddles, impeller band, and discharge throat V-Band are now all stainless steel for longer wear and less maintenance.

Stainless Steel Auger Shroud Cover

Features strong, corrosion-resistant type 409 stainless steel construction.

'TIS THE SEASON!

Yes - The Harvest Season Is Here!
Store your good corn crop in a POURED CONCRETE SOLLENBERGER SILO.

Units available for "High-Moisture" shelled corn or "Ground Ear" corn. Bottom-Unloading or Top-Unloading. Consider the Many Advantages of Concrete! 6" thick concrete walls to keep feed cooler because concrete reflects the sun's rays, and has 25 times more insulating power than steel. The concrete silo has a much lower maintenance requirement because there are not thousands of bolts to rust and work loose and no seams to reseal. The poured concrete silo is heavily reinforced to give you a very strong structure.

Unload from the bottom with a simple auger for high-moisture shelled corn, (least expensive); Laidig 43 for shelled corn or cob corn, or Flying Dutchman for grains or Forages.

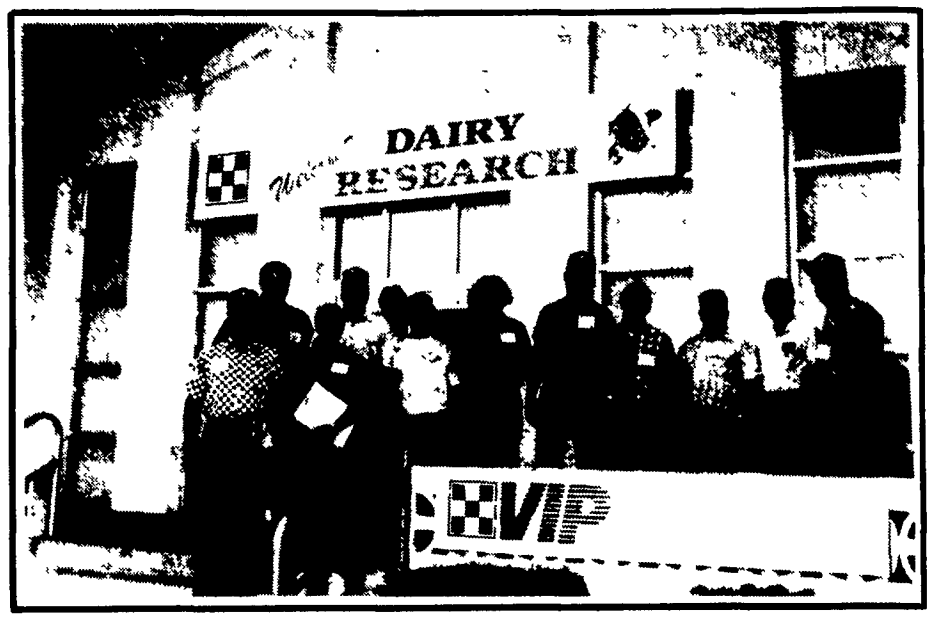
PURINA RESEARCH FARM TOUR UPDATE



Approximately 120 dairy farmers from Pennsylvania, Maryland, and New York visited the Purina Mills Research Farm during the last week of August. Located in Gray Summit, Missouri, Purina conducts performance trials to see what feeds provide superior performance under conditions found on your farm. All aspects of dairy research is studied.

We asked farmers from Lancaster, Lebanon, and Berks Counties in Pennsylvania to give us their opinions of what they saw... here's what they had to say:

"It was reassuring to find that Purina Mills is dedicated to bringing us top quality feed through their extensive research."

"Purina is the No. 1 feed company in the U.S.A. I'm proud to be a customer."

"Purina is more than they advertise to be!"

"Our trip to the Purina Research Farm was very educational. The operation is clean and the equipment appears to be the best. As I watch my heifers grow and develop I will be able to appreciate the effort put in by the Purina Research Team. I very much enjoyed the fellowship of the trip."

"The research farm was great. The clinics were very educational. I learned many things about cows that I did not know. The products and the way the animals were growing makes me want to feed your feed."

"Purina research has the finest technology and is a great tool."

"After visiting the research farm you get the checkerboard in your blood. Purina has a very good set-up."

"Purina research is no. 1 in the feed industry. The Purina products are the best on the market."

"I was impressed with the practicality of the research facility and the research itself. Their ideas could be used by the average dairyman."

"A real winner keeps trying new ways to stay ahead of the rest. Keep up the work on the best ways to make profits. The tour was real interesting."

"I got a broad view of what's behind the Purina name. No wonder the feed salesman can talk for hours when they come to our farm."

"Your farm tour was educational and satisfying knowing firsthand that the products you sell are researched and tested. After this visit I have no reservations about recommending Purina products to fellow farmers."

"I learned several management practices that I am currently using on my farm are incorrect as proven by Purina Research. I need to make a few changes in some of my methods that should help me to be more profitable and do a better job; especially in my calf and heifer management.

"Thank you Purina and their staff for a fine trip and for doing a fine job feeding my herd."

"My tour of the research center woke me up to some of the things I should be doing on my own farm."

"When I saw what they did at the Checkerboard Place, it put a smile on my face. When I get home and look at that bag with the checkerboard square and I'll say, when you're all I'll put another there and you can bet it will have a checkerboard square."

"It was very interesting, we learned about cow scoring and many other tips."

"Very educational for all dairymen, thanks for the trip."

"A very educational, interesting, and enjoyable trip. Thanks to Purina."

"Purina products are good in quality."

"I greatly enjoyed the trip and it strengthened my trust in the product. Thanks very much, God bless you."

"My trip to the Purina Research Farm was very informative and demonstrated their strong commitment to provide quality products, as well as, quality advice to every customer."

"Was impressed with the kindness to the research animals, the courteous staff and workers, and the clean, well kept yard."

"The trip was great, the management was great, as was the food. It gave me information about how to feed my heifers and dry cows."
